MAID GIVES NURSE CLEW

MRS. GREEN'S GREAT SACRIFICE FOR LOVE ENDS IN DIVORCE CASE

Mr. Green was superintendent of the Garland estates at Bourne.

Francis Cushing Green, for whom "Jimmy" Garland's widow gave up a million dollars to wed.

The love for which Mrs. Marie Tudor Garland Green sacrificed a round million dollars has lasted a little two years.

The crash in the second and apparently idyllic romance in the life of this Boston society girl became known today, with the discovery of a divorce suit which has been filed for Mrs. Green at Barnstable court-house, down on the Cape. Mrs. Green accuses Mr. Green of a statutory offence. She says in her bill of complaint, however, that the name of the woman is unknown to her.

When Marie Tudor Garland, widow of "Jimmy" Garland, married Francis Cushing Green in May, 1912, she surrendered the income of a million dollars. By the Garland will this income was to go to the five Garland children if the widow remarried. Mrs. Garland cast this wealth aside, saying:

"I am marrying for love. You see, money isn't everything and love is—or pretty nearly."

But now, Mrs. Green's second romance has perished and she is without either the love or the million dollars.

This is the second time a divorce court has figured in the life of Marie Tudor, who is a sister of Frederick Tudor of Needham, Mrs. Frederick S. Converse of Westwood, Mrs. Edward W. Slade and Mrs. W. Starling Burgess.

Her marriage, divorce and remarriage to James A. Garland, whose name was mentioned in the Thaw trial, although sensations in the society life of Boston and the Cape at the time, were surpassed when the former Bourne girl renounced her right to his estate and married Green.

It was reported that Garland's estate was worth $10,000,000, but the day of the wedding the value of the estate was placed at close to a million dollars.

Green was attorney and superintendent of the Garland estates at Bourne and a lifelong friend of the widow.

The ceremony took place on Saturday, May 25, 1912, in the Garland country home at Bourne, on Cape Cod. It was simple and homelike. Only relatives attended and Mrs. Green's five children, four boys and a girl, were in the front row of the family group when the words were spoken which made their mother a bride for the third time.

MADAME CAILLAUX COLLAPSES

PARIS, July 25.—The climax of the melodramatic thrills which have accompanied the trial of Mme. Henriette Caillaux for the murder of Gaston Calmette came today when Judge Louis Albanel, president of the Assize Court, challenged one of his associates to a duel, and the defendant collapsed in court.

Judge Albanel, incensed at insinuations of Associate Judge Louis Dagoury that he had acted with partiality in deciding the issue of the private Calmette letters, sent his seconds to Dagoury demanding an apology or else satisfaction on the field of honor.

Mme. Caillaux was wan and weak when she was led into court for the sixth day's session of her trial. She had to be assisted to her chair and trembled violently.

LETTERS ARE READ.

Immediately after court convened Judge Albanel ruled that the famous and mysterious Caillaux letters about which a long and bitter fight raged yesterday should be read. In making the ruling, however, Judge Albanel established certain conditions. Maitre Labori announced this condition was that only parts of the correspondence which are pertinent should be read into the record.

"Those parts which would bring a blush to the face of the spectators will be omitted," said Labori.

The reading of the letters was commenced but almost immediately was interrupted by Mme. Caillaux, who fell from her chair in a faint. She was carried insensible to the basement quarters of the Palace of Justice, where medical aid was given her.

Further details of the Caillaux trial on Page 10.

Trading in French Rentes Is Stopped

PARIS, July 25.—For the first time since the Russo-Japanese war, transactions in French rentes, government bonds, were stopped by the Minister of Finance. This action was taken to prevent a disastrous financial loss in these securities.

May Consent to Exclusion of 5 Ulster Counties

LONDON, July 25.—Conferences of Unionists and Irish Nationalists were held here today to inaugurate a program of action for next week, when the Home Rule amending bill will be called up in the House of Commons.

According to Premier Asquith's present plan this bill will be up for second reading Tuesday evening. It is believed that the government will consent to the exclusion of five of the six Ulster counties from the operations of the Home Rule bill (providing the residents of these counties vote for exclusion), while the sixth will be left in doubt. Its inclusion will likely be left to a referendum also.

GLADYS' SUITOR IN CELL

The case of the runaway Gladys P. Chase of Roxbury took a strange new tourn today when Frederick W. Darmer, twenty-one years old, of Somerville, with whom it was thought she eloped, was arrested and brought into the Dorchester District Court on the charge for which he was sought at the time of her disappearance. The strange part comes in the fact that the Chase girl and Darmer had taken out a marriage license an adtarted for a minister or justice of the peace to be married. They never reached their destination and no one knew what became of them until Darmer was arrested. What caused the sudden turn is a mystery.

When unseen together recently Dalmer and Miss Chase were apparently the best of friends. But today Miss Chase told Special Officer Patrick Williams, who prosecuted the case, that she would not marry Dalmer under any conditions. In this declaration she was seconded by her mother and sister, Mrs. Leon Hope Adams of Dorchester, from whose home Miss Chase disappeared a week ago last Thursday.

Miss Chase, becomingly attired in a pink dress, was in court with her mother and sister. She did not testify against Darmer.

No one appeared to furnish bail for Darmer and he was sent to the Charles street jail.

Steamer Middlesex Sued for Collision

The steamer Middlesex has been libeled in the United States District Court by the Russell Company, owners of the five-masted schooner George P. Hudson, which was sunk July 14 by collision with the Middlesex. The plaintiff says the schooner was valued at $40,000 and was carrying a cargo of coal worth $9,577. The captain and crew also claim $600 for personal property and an interesting petition for damages for bone, flesh and blood. The master of the schooner, who seek damages for personal injuries.

AUTO CRASH: THREE HURT

ACCUSER IS VICTIM OF HOLD-UP

Nineteen-year-old Myer Cohen of Dorchester was charged in Roxbury District Court today with breaking and entering and stealing $76 worth of goods from the home of his father, the jeweler, doing business as C. Alberts, who had reported to the police only a few hours before that $10,000 worth of unst diamonds had been stolen from him.

The arrest of young Cohen came as a strange development to the sensation already caused by the jewel robbery.

First came the news today that C. Alberts had reported that $10,000 worth of diamonds had been stolen from him last Thursday night, presumably under cover of a row started in a trolley car in upper Washington street, on which Mr. Alberts was riding home with two men friends.

Alberts took it for granted that the gang which created the street car trouble, in which Mr. Alberts was assaulted, did it to get the diamonds which were in a jewel wallet in an inner pocket of his overcoat.

FATHER IS COMPLAINANT.

Later today came the arraignment of Myer Cohen before Judge Perrin in West Roxbury District Court on a charge of breaking and entering his parents' home at No. 18 Angell street, Dorchester, and stealing eyeglasses, locket, bracelet and chain, all valued at $76.

Young Cohen's father was in court complaining against his son. The reporters were surprised to find him the same man who had reported the diamond robbery under the name of C. Alberts. This was readily explained by the father thus:

"Myer Cohen is my son. Cohen is my right name. But I am registered under the name of Alberts in business. My concern is Charles Alberts & Co. at No. 749 Washington street. I live at No. 18 Angell street, Dorchester."

Young Cohen pleaded not guilty to the breaking and entering and larceny charge. His case was continued until July 29. Bail was fixed at $500. His father left the court room.

Maine Man's Body in Canal at Lowell

LOWELL, July 25.—The body of Harris Jameson was found floating in the canal near the plant of the Hamilton Manufacturing Company today. Jameson's home was in East Orrington, Me., but he has been employed at the State Infirmary at Tewksbury since last May.

One Badly Injured; Three Shaken Up in Milton Auto Crash

One man was seriously injured and three others badly shaken up in an automobile collision in Milton today.

The car, driven by Robert L. Arnuckle who drives for the Metropolitan Park Police and who lives at No. 44 Pearl street, Milford, collided with another car in which were Frederick Baird, Thomas B. Houston and Fred V. Blanchard, all of Hough's Neck.

Baird's arm was broken and he suffered internal injuries. The other three escaped with bruises. The accident occured at Centre avenue, Canton avenue and White street, Milton.

Wilson Ultimatum to Warburg Reported

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The withdrawal of the nomination of Paul M. Warburg as a member of the Federal Reserve Board not later than next Tuesday or Wednesday was predicted today. This forecast followed reports that President Wilson had served notice on Warburg that he either must ask to be dropped from the list or agree to come at once before the Banking and Currency Committee.

Senators in Hot Trade Bill Debate

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 25.—Keyed up to fighting pitch by the first exchange of shots in the battle to regulate big business, a score of Senators waited today to get into the debate on the federal trade commission bill when the Senate again took up the measure. Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, who opened the argument against the bill, still had much to say.

$500,000 Loss in Packing Plant Fire

CHICAGO, July 25.—Fire early today caused $500,000 damage to the cooperage shop and lard and tallow refinery of Morris & Co. meat packers. Two million pounds of lard, 12,000 gallons of grease and 5,000 dressed hogs were burned.

SLAIN WOMAN KEPT TRYST WITH MAN ON FATAL SUNDAY

Investigation of the mysterious death of Miss Ada Taylor at Winthrop today was accompanied by a search for Frederick Roberts, a veteran of the Boer War, who disappeared from his place of employment in Winthrop on July 3, and who is believed to have been acquainted with the dead woman.

Roberts is a new figure in the case, and the police want to ask him if he knew Miss Taylor and if he is able to throw any light on her movements on the day she disappeared from the Ceder home and the three days following.

GIRL GIVES NEW CLEW.

The search for Roberts and a story told by Miss Mary McGee, a maid in the home of a Mrs. Gilman at No. 261 Shirley street, Winthrop, next door to the house of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ceder, where Miss Taylor was employed as a nurse, are the two most important developments in the mystery during the past twenty-four hours.

On the Sunday she disappeared Miss Taylor told the McGee girl she had an appointment at 3 o'clock in the afternoon with a "man from England." This is regarded as important by the police. They say it establishes the fact that a man played an important part in her sudden disappearance. The identity of this man is thought to have been established and his arrest is expected today.

Roberts went to work for John Dale, a plumber and caulker at No. 175 Shirley street, Winthrop, on June 24. He remained in the employ of Dale until July 3, when he disappeared, leaving behind him a suit case containing practically all of his effects.

SEEN ON TRAIN.

On the day Roberts disappeared Dale saw him getting on the 2:15 p. m. train for Boston at Ocean Spray station in Winthrop, and asked him where he was going.

"I am going to Boston to get a soda," he replied.

That was the last Dale saw or heard from him, although Roberts is reported to have been seen in Winthrop six times since then. Roberts' failure to return or send for his suit case led Dale to report his disappearance to the Metropolitan Park police.

Dale told the police a woman, who answers the description of Ada Taylor, called to see Roberts at the plumbing shop several times while he was working there. The proprietor said Roberts appeared to be well acquainted with the woman but when he asked him what she wanted he says Roberts replied:

"Oh, she is only trying to get me to do some work for her."

Roberts is known to have lived and worked in Providence, New York and Boston. He is said to be an Englishman and fought in the Boer War.

Dale describes Roberts as between forty and forty-four, of dark complexion, five feet three inches tall, weighs about 120 pounds. He has blue eyes, dark hair, dark mustache, and his lower teeth are filled with gold.

The Metropolitan Park police are today making every effort to find the man with whom Ada Taylor told the McGee girl she had an appointment. They want to know if he is the husband of the nurse.

They want to know if he is the man whom she told her girl friend she expected to meet on the Carnival on the evening of Sunday, July 12, when she so strangely disappeared with her suit case. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ceder of No. 359 Shirley street.

They want to know if he is the suitor whom Frederick Wilson claimed later secretly wedded Miss Taylor and of whom she was in such terror for months. It is thought he is the man she mentioned in letters to Wilson when she wrote that she feared something was going to happen to her, and that Wilson would know.

They want to know if he is the original of the little snapshot found in the gold locket taken from her trunk, which had been discarded a month in the outward baggage room of the North Station.

MAID NEW WITNESS.

They have a notion that perhaps her husband, long absent, had located her unexpectedly, and had induced her to come to him, and that this may account for the baffling gap of three days between her strange exit from the Ceder home and the discovery of her body floating near the beach on Thursday morning.

Miss Mary McGee's [illegible] has put an entirely different complexion on the case.

Miss McGee's story is important. It fixes Ada Taylor's movements on Saturday, July 11, the day before she left Winthrop. Miss McGee was employed at the Ceder home and was a friend of Miss Taylor. She

AUSTRIA WILL GIVE SERVIA NO EXTENSION

LONDON, July 25.—A dispatch from Vienna says the Austrian government today gave a negative answer to Russia's request that Servia be given an extension of time in which to reply to Austria's ultimatum.

A press dispatch from Belgrade via Vienna this afternoon says the Servian Cabinet has decided to acquiesce to the demands of Austria's ultimatum under protest.

Czar Nicholas today presided in person over the official meeting of the ministerial council at St. Petersburg. It was reported that orders would be issued immediately for the mobilization of the Russian army.

There was a meeting of the Servian cabinet today in Belgrade at which the ultimatum from Vienna was discussed at length. Afterwards orders were executed for heavy troop movements toward the South.

The Servian Parliament was convened in extraordinary session this afternoon. It is reported that the Drina and Danube divisions of the army have been called to the colors. Servian outposts along the Bosnian frontier are being strengthened.

Excitement is at fever heat. Crowds are parading the streets calling upon the government to defy Austria. Members of the Pan-Slavic union, the powerful organization of Slays which extends into Russia and Hungary, are calling for war.

CANNON GUARD DANUBE.

Servian flags decorate all the buildings. The military guard at the Belgrade end of the international bridge across the Danube has been strengthened. The Danube is heavily mined and heavy cannon are trained upon the bridge.

Conservatives are pleading with the members of the government to give a needle answer to Austria.

GOVERNMENT MAY FALL.

An affirmative reply to the ultimatum while saving Servia from war, would cause a downfall of the present government. Such an answer would pledge Servia to curb the ambition for a Greater Servian empire, which is objectionable to Austria; suppress the Pan-Slavic movement; punish the assassinators of Archduke Francis Ferdinand.

AUSTRIA WARNS "HANDS OFF."

"Hands off" is the attitude adopted by the Austrian government in the Austro-Servian crisis. The government is in receipt of representations for an extension of time for Servia to reply to the ultimatum.

All Austrian reservists living in Berlin were today ordered to rejoin their regiments. The German Ambassador at St. Petersburg has been instructed to urge Russia not to interfere in the Austro-Servian crisis.

Baron von Giesl von Gieslingen, the Austro-Hungarian minister at Belgrade, has been instructed to leave Servia and the Legation staff of by 6 o'clock tonight the Servian government has not notified him that it agrees to the delivery of Austria with the demands of Austria's note.

The bourses of Europe were demoralized today by the "war rumors." In Paris, Berlin, Vienna and here prices of securities were much lower.

DEMANDS OF AUSTRIA.

The Austrian ultimatum contains the following demands:

First—The Servian government must publish official disavowal of its connection with the anti-Austrian propaganda.

Second—The Servian government must make a vigorous investigation of the part played by Slays in this city in the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, and the Austrian throne, and his wife.

Third—Servia must suppress all the Pan Slavic societies which are carrying on a political campaign against Austria.

Fourth—Servia must suppress the activities of Slav agents in Bosnia and Herzegovina, who are working for the detriment of territory from Austria.

"Centipede" Engine Makes World Record

BINGHAMTON, July 25—The Erie Railroad conducted a test here yesterday of the pulling power of the new centipede locomotive, which weighs 416 tons and has twenty-four driving wheels, eight of them being under the tender to secure additional driving power. The locomotive pulled 250 cars loaded to 21,000 tons forty miles at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, establishing a new train load record for the world.

DANCE AS SUN RISES AT CHINESE DINNER GIVEN TO CONSUELO

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

Latest snapshot of Consuelo Duchess of Marlborough, who is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Belmont, at Marble House, Newport.

NEWPORT, July 25—The eagerly awaited and much discussed Chinese ball at Marble House, the home of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont exceeded all expectations in picturesque setting, elaborate decorations and display of beautiful and costly gowns. The Duchess of Marlborough, titled daughter of the hostess, was guest of honor, both at the ball and at a dinner given by Mrs. Fish at Crossways, preceding it.

Mrs. Belmont received her guests in the drawing room of Marble House, assisted by the Duchess. The ball was held in the Louis XIV drawing room, which is off the main hall on the first floor. Flowers were the chief decoration inside the house, but the grounds were transformed into an Oriental fairyland.

About one hundred guests were entertained at the dinner by Mrs. Fish. All wore their Chinese costumes and Chinese decorations were the order.

TEAHOUSE BLAZE OF GLORY.

At the conclusion of the dinner the guests proceeded to Marble House, where everything was in readiness. Electric lights were everywhere. There was an enclosed space on the terrace, near the cliffs, which was used for the serving of supper.

The Chinese teahouse, which was erected recently by Mrs. Belmont and stands at a distance from the house, was electrically lighted, both within and without, and was in a perfect blaze of glory. Here the couples strolled. Stationed nearby was the Seventh Band, Coast Artillery Corps, which played all night, beginning at 11 o'clock.

Some of those oppressed by the heat inside came out on the lawn and continued to dance on the grass and on the terrace, dancing to the strains of the military band.

A striking feature of the ornamentation of the teahouse was the use for the first time of the thirty sacred lanterns of wrought iron and bronze. All of these are at least 2,000 years old. Mrs. Belmont has been long collecting them.

Conrad's Orchestra played at the top of the stairway in Marble House, and the music could be heard plainly all over the mansion. The decorations were chiefly floral, and consisted of such flowers as grow in China, as far as was possible.

Many of the gowns had been imported for the occasion direct from China, but most of them came from various collections of Chinese antiques and collections in this country.

ROBED AS EMPRESS.

Mrs. Belmont was magnificently robed as the Empress Chang in a royal robe, where she obtained it is a secret that she refused to divulge, but she has told friends that its history is remarkable. It had an under skirt of mauve silk, which shaded to rose, and was embroidered in a riot of colors, including blue, green, pink and yellow.

Historic scenes from Chinese song and story were embroidered on panels set into the gown, and the royal dragon was woven into the costume in true Chinese style from head to foot. The undergarment was of gold cloth.

Over all her splendor Mrs. Belmont wore ropes of turquoise and diamonds, with large brooches and sapphire pendants. The whole front of the tunic was a blaze of precious stones. The value of the whole costume is entirely beyond estimate.

DUCHESS IN VELVET.

The costume of the beautiful Duchess of Marlborough, Mrs. Belmont's daughter, was equally remarkable. The effect was one of black velvet and cloth of gold and was modeled upon the costume of the consort of a certain one of the Empresses of the Ming dynasty.

This costume was in three pieces, tunic, skirt and trousers. The skirt was of black velvet cut very full and falling in great rich folds and curves. It was richly embroidered, the main figure being the imperial dragon of the Chinese Empire.

The tunic and the trousers were of cloth of gold, the tunic embroidered also with the dragon emblem.

The headdress was a remarkable feature of this costume. It was of black velvet, with gold trimmings, and much smaller than the gem-plated turban worn by Mrs. Belmont. It was more like a fez.

The shoes were of Chinese make and of black velvet with gold trimmings. Gold earrings and black serpentine bracelets completed the costume. Her mass of black hair and her remarkable beautiful eyes, which by a touch of brow-pencil had been given a decidedly Chinese turn, made the Duchess of Marlborough a figure who might easily have passed unquestioned in the very Imperial Palace at Pekin.

SON-IN-LAW'S SLAYER TO PLEA UNWRITTEN LAW

HAVERSTRAW, N. Y., July 25.—William V. Cleary, held in jail for killing Eugene M. Newman, his eighteen-year-old son-in-law, will make the unwritten law his defence.

As the result of the cursory investigation, it was shown that the young son-in-law was shot down before he could have a single word with his father-in-law. Young Newman went to Cleary's office in a frightened but repentant state. He wanted to tell Cleary that he had wronged his daughter Anna, twenty-one, but that he had made things right as best he could by marrying the girl. He wanted to ask forgiveness and assure Cleary that he would settle down and "make good."

Announcement of the young man's presence at the door of the town clerk's office, it appears, put the father-in-law in a rage. Concealing this rage for a moment he asked the boy to be seated. Then he went to a safe, got out a big revolver, and without a word of warning advanced to the chair where his victim sat and shot him four times. He fired the revolver about two feet from Newman.

Cleary is preparing a defense of emotional insanity. He will claim he did not know of the marriage and shot to clear his family name.

Won't Be Puppy Dog, Pauline Frederick Says of Divorce

"I will not be a puppy dog for any man," today declared Pauline Frederick, just back from abroad, when asked as to the status of her dissension from her millionaire architect husband, Frank M. Andrews of New York.

"I have received a divorce, to be sure," she declared, "but the decree is outside of New York State, and I wish to obtain one there. Love may be love, but I prefer a career on the stage to being a mere nonentity. I'm going to find out just what the situation is."

MRS. BAILEY KILLED BY MAN, DEFENCE CLAIM

FREEPORT, N. Y., July 25.—Developments of prime importance in connection with plans for the trial of Mrs. Florence Carman, charged with the killing of Mrs. Louise Bailey, are announced today by counsel for the defense that it will be proved that a man did the shooting and that the damaging evidence furnished to the Grand Jury by Frank Farrell, alias "Cullen," will be shown to be perjury.

It was announced that evidence had been secured which would show that the man who killed Mrs. Bailey is one of the social leaders of southern Long Island, and that when he is formally brought into the case, at least seven other prominent names will be mentioned.

Concerning Farrell, the State's chief witness, who testified that he saw a woman running away from the window of Dr. Carman's office with a revolver in her hand, Attorney Levy declared that Farrell "simply lies."

"We will show," said Levy, "that Farrell never was in Freeport on the day of the killing and that he had other motives for telling his lies. We have detectives looking up his record and will show some very interesting things about this man."

Gaby Isn't French; Name Is Nevratil

VIENNA, July 25.—Gaby Deslys has always been considered the epitome of Paris chic and French vivacity. It now appears that the fair Gaby is neither Parisian nor Gallic. Vienna, not Marseilles, is her birth place and Poland claims her as one of her distinguished daughters because her parents were from Galicia.

"LORD FAUNTLEROY," BOY HERO OF STORY, TO WED IN AUGUST

Miss Constance C. Buel, New York society girl and amateur actress, who is to marry Vivian Burnett, famed in youth as "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Nation-wide interest will be felt in the news that "Little Lord Fauntleroy" is to marry. His bride-elect is Miss Constance C. Buel of New York.

His engaging lordship in the flesh is Vivian Burnett, son of Mrs. Frances Hodgdon Burnett, the author of the charming story, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which was a "best seller" over one score of years ago.

Vivian Burnett, then a boy, was the original of the lovable little fellow who was the hero of the book. A Fauntleroy wave swept over the country. Fauntleroy suits and Fauntleroy curls were the fashion for every boy. The suits could be purchased. If nature did not provide the curls, then the barbers did, in full and flowing ringlets which were sewn inside the hat band.

Vivian Burnett grew to manhood. He is now thirty-eight years old. But, from the first edition of his mother's story, he was dubbed "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and the title has clung to him since.

For several years Mr. Burnett was associate editor of the Century Magazine. He lives at Plandome, his mother's Long Island estate.

Miss Buel is the daughter of Clarence Clough Buel of No. 130 East Sixty-seventh street, New York. With her sister, Miss Beatrice Buel, she is noted as an amateur actress. The sisters were recently presented to society. They are now at the Buel summer place at Ridgefield, Ct.

The wedding is to take place early in August.

HUERTA PARTY CARRIES BIG SUM OF GOLD

KINGSTON, Jamaica, July 25.—General Huerta and General Blanquet, ex-Minister of War in Mexico, landed at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and went to the Myrtlebank Hotel. Huerta was dressed in white while Blanquet was in the uniform of a general of the army. General Huerta, who appeared to be in good spirits, said in answer to a request for an interview:

"I cannot give an interview before tomorrow. I shall go from Kingston to Spain direct and from the latter country will proceed to Germany. I am through with Mexico. I believe anarchy will continue in the interior of the country."

Huerta laughed at the report that he was going to Nicaragua to organize a revolt in Mexico. He declared that Carbajal, his successor, should fight to the end unless General Carranza, the first chief of the Constitutionalists, guaranteed amnesty to the Liberals.

General Huerta said he was not worrying because he had to leave Mexico. He expressed his gratitude to the German government for the courtesies extended to himself and family in bringing them here on the Dresden.

The party, which consists of General Huerta and his wife and family, General Blanquet and family and Senor and Senora Villa and their two children, brought twenty trunks of baggage. They also had a large sum of money in gold.

BEACHES THRONGED TO SEE WEBSTER IN BIG FLIGHT TODAY

Clifford Webster, the young aviator, who makes his fourth great flight for the AMERICAN this afternoon, arrived at the Burgess-Curtis plant at Marblehead today, gave a look out over the harbor and grinned.

"The sun was burning away the morning mists, and Marblehead Harbor lay all dimpling and sparkling before him. There was a mild southwest wind, and every promise of a cloudless sky for the flight this afternoon.

"This is going to be the finest flight of them all, from my point of view," Webster said. "I've been looking forward to it ever since it was first arranged. Nobody who hasn't tried it can understand the fun of flying, anyway.

FOLLOWS SHORE LINE.

"And when you're flying along shore—half over the water, half over the land, picking up new landmarks and drawing up on them and passing them as a man climbs up a rope—it's great.

"Of course, I know Boston Harbor as well as you know your own dining room. That is, I know how it looks from above. But this will be about the longest flight I've ever made over the harbor.

"I'm going to follow the shore line pretty closely. That will take me along Swampscott Beach and Lynn Beach and then around Bass Point. Then I'll skirt along Revere—ugly as that there was a crowd there last Sunday—and then along Winthrop Beach. From there it's straight across the mouth of the harbor to Wollaston, then back over Hough's Neck and down over Paragon Park to the water.

"Indications are that the day will be a perfect one for flying—the air may be a little humid. The wind will help me about as much as it hinders, if it stays in the southwest.

At the Burgess-Curtis plant everything was ready for the flight long before the hour. Webster planned to get into the air sharply at 3 o'clock—the minute the last estimates of his time had been received at the Promotion Department of the AMERICAN.

TENTATIVE TIME TABLE.

A tentative time table of his flight would mean that shore-folks can look for him

At Swampscott from 3 to 3:15.
At Lynn Beach from 3:10 to 3:25.
At Bass Point from 3:20 to 3:35.
At Revere from 3:25 to 3:40.
At Wollaston from 3:35 to 3:50.
At Hough's Neck from 3:40 to 3:55.
At Paragon Park from 3:45 to 4.

It was estimated that he would not arrive at any of the points named BEFORE the hour given—and probably a little later.

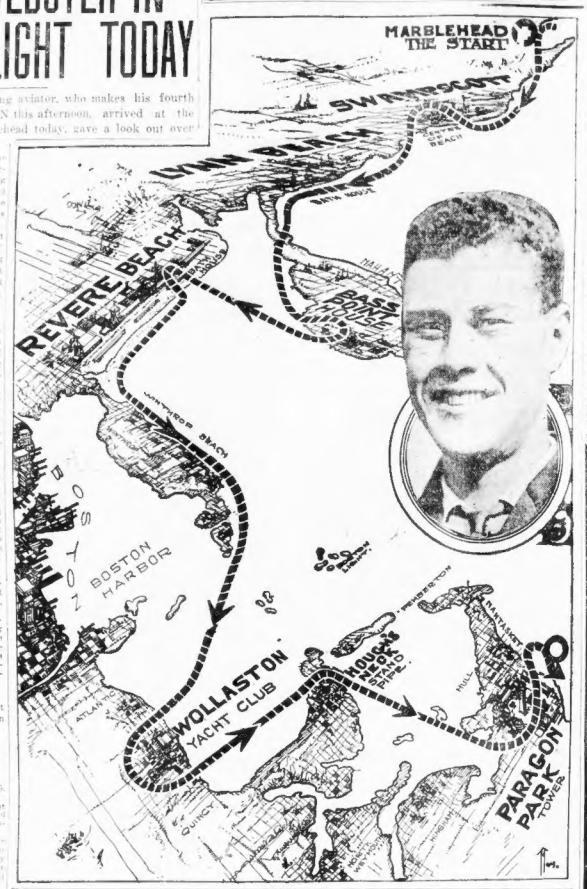
Meanwhile into the office of the AMERICAN, the estimates of Webster's time have been pouring. They range from sixty minutes for the whole flight to twenty minutes. All show thought and careful figuring.

The coupons for these estimates have been printed in the AMERICAN during the past few days, and the estimates were presented on these coupons, or copies of them. Many individuals entered several estimates.

BIG CROWD AT NANTASKET.

Also the Nantasket boats were thronged from midmorning on with excursionists bent on seeing the spectacular finish of the flight, and on seeing Webster's try for altitude. The throngs went early, planning to dine at Paragon Park, or Coleman's restaurant, or Jerry's Hotel, or the Nantasket Hotel. They visited the Old Mill and the other amusement resorts.

They planned to make a day of it.



And most of them were equipped with the altitude estimating scale from today's AMERICAN. This scale is so accurate that in the contest last Sunday when the same scale was used, two contestants correctly estimated the altitude.

THESE TWO CONTESTANTS, IN RECOGNITION OF THEIR SKILL AND CARE, WILL EACH BE PRESENTED WITH $100 AS THE FIRST AWARD.

The names of these two contestants and of the others clever enough to win awards, will be printed in tomorrow's AMERICAN.

TOMORROW'S AMERICAN WILL ALSO CONTAIN THE LIST OF WINNERS IN THE TIME-ESTIMATING CONTEST.

And tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN will also contain a coupon for sending in altitude estimates. This coupon or a copy of it may be used, and must be in the Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, before Wednesday next at 6 p. m. The winners in this contest will be announced in the Sunday AMERICAN of August 2.

WHERE TO SEE WEBSTER.

Aviator Clifford Webster and route of his great flight today. This map and diagram show how to pick out a point of vantage from which to watch the airman and the route he will take from Nantasket this afternoon. Webster will leave Marblehead about 3 p. m. Thousands will view his flight.

FIND GIRL OF 17 A SUICIDE BY HANGING

Ida Mutta, only seventeen years old, was found dead by her own hand today in an unfinished attic room in the home of Louis J. Jobin, where she was employed, at No. 169 Elmwood avenue, Wollaston. The girl had hanged herself to a rafter. Of late she had suffered from deep melancholy. The cause of her sorrow, whether homesickness, unrequited love or other reason, has yet to be explained.

When the girl did not come downstairs today members of the Jobin family investigated. In her room on the top floor the sad scene was made. Search was made in the unfurnished room the suicide was discovered.

"CHIP" ROBINSON'S DRAMATIC LIFE STORY

CHAPTER IX.

"And one man in his time plays many parts."—(As You Like It.)

...police, detectives, sheriffs and ... were frantically arresting ... and that, while Blackburn ... fled and while Chief Deputy U. Smith was sourly declaring Blackburn innocent—during ... activities "Vopper" Lawrence and "Chip" Robinson were ... about the business of ... saw it—especially "Vopper."

At the start "Vopper" Lawrence's one singular asset in comparison with "Diamond Chip"—kinship to police. "Diamond Chip's" ... Smith, was for many years chief of police in Washington ... Ohio. The connection, ... is boasted by neither. "Vopper" Lawrence is the son of ... Hunter Lawrence, who was ... Covington, Ky., for ... years. His career was a ... of grief to his father and ... mother. Mrs. Hunter Lawrence, in common with Mrs. Jennings, has the deep despair that ... mothers of erring sons. ... is related of "Vopper" that ... he was a boy in Covington ... became one of a wild gang. A ... freedom of the gang was to set up ... fence nine ft. back lot and blaze away at them with revolvers. That ... gang should travel armed was bad enough, but the sinister note in the proceedings was that each tomato can named for a member of the Covington police force. Thus ... shaved at shooting down the police, though never dreaming prob... of the deadly trend of such ... recreation.

FAMILIAR WITH GUNS.

But this boyish practice gave "Vopper" a familiarity with firearms in fact case the use of revolvers was acquired, pure and simple. In Robinson's case there was the pre-natal tendency, as it is now explained at Washington Courthouse, due to his mother's practice with a revolver when filled with wild anger toward his father.

After the death of his father "Vopper" fell into most evil ways. He became known to the police and he was out of his teens. He is only twenty-six years old now, for that matter.

Ere he was old enough to vote "Vopper" was a lawbreaker. He held up a Covington grocer in company with another ill-starred youth named Hans Wachter. They robbed the grocer. They were caught and sent to the county workhouse. On their release they held up a druggist, nearly killing him.

Wachter was caught in Cincinnati, which is just across the Ohio river from Covington, and was given five years. "Vopper" fled, was arrested in Ohio for a minor offense and sent to a reformatory. There the Covington police found him. He was brought back to Covington and sent to the Kentucky State Prison at Frankfort.

That was six years ago. "Vopper" gradually lost many of his fellow prisoners. "There's another pardon," said "Sam," Vopper, there's a new man in for a two-year term. You oughter know him."

"Vopper" Lawrence was working in the prison shoe factory. The new man was in the stock room. It came about that "Vopper" was sent to the stock room, and there he met the newcomer. The meeting, though neither man knew it at the time, was heavy with significance. It was to shape—or mis-shape—the lives of both. For the other man was none other than "Diamond Chip" Robinson.

Strange as it may seem, maybe it was not so strange that "Vopper" Lawrence and "Diamond Chip" Robinson should meet in the crook's own clubhouse, a prison, considering the courses of their lives.

"Diamond Chip" was in for only two years, while "Vopper" was a long-term man. But a year ago, just as "Diamond Chip's" terms was concluding, "Vopper" suddenly gave the prison officials some information so valuable that he was released.

"Vopper" went to Covington, remained there a short time, left, then came back. He was busy securing signatures, he said, against the nation-wide prohibition movement. This did not strike acquaintances of the man as strange. He was addicted to drink, so much that he let it get the better of him. He had a reputation, too, of being more than usually vicious and reckless when in his cups. Such men deem prohibition absolutely wrong. A nation without liquor was "Vopper's" idea of no kind of a body politic.

RENEW OLD FRIENDSHIP.

According to "Vopper" it was "Diamond Chip" Robinson who renewed the acquaintance formed in prison. "Vopper" says that Robinson came after him. Lawrence's account of the renewal of the acquaintance made at Frankfort prison is as follows:

"For a time after I got out of prison I had nothing to do with Robinson, but he hunted me up. I was working on a railroad. He learned this through my mother.

"Robinson called on mother several times. He told her he was a furniture salesman. She believed him, because he was so plausible. He told her he had a good job for me, and she told him where I was working. He came to where I was working and stayed there with me. He told me he wanted me to go to the fairs and circuses with him, as he had some concessions he wanted me to handle. Anyhow, I went along with him."

Such is the main part of "Vopper" Lawrence's life up to the time he and Robinson landed in Grand Rapids to turn the fatal trick at the Thompson jewelry store.

During the first hue and cry after the two men, the fugitives were speeding toward Chicago. They read with consummate calm the newspaper accounts of the triple shooting. Then they proceeded to Toledo, where they put up at a lodging house run by the Misses Clara and Celia Hurley.

Here the pair divided the stolen jewelry. Then "Vopper" Lawrence showed himself no mean rival of Robinson, so far as mingling romance and robbery. He decided that, being well established in his chosen profession (?), he should take unto himself a wife. He wooed and won Miss Clara Hurley, one of his two landladies. The wedding took place in Toledo.

The honeymoon period, however, was rudely interrupted by a tip, gained through the underworld channel, that a Grand Rapids detective was on the trail. "Vopper" took his bride down to his old home in Covington, Ky.

"Diamond Chip" Robinson never saw "Vopper" again, so far as known.

All chapters of this serial to date will be reprinted in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN and continued Monday.

There is no "off-season" for advertising now-a-days

Did you ever hear of the old lady who contracted with the newspaper to run her advertisement continuously for six months? She started the advertisement in July, and after noticing it a few times let it run along without changing the wording. Along in the bleak days of January she was horrified to see that it read "nice cool rooms to let."

Only a few advertisers make mistakes like that, but it is a wonder that more advertisers do not take full advantage of seasonableness, which is a great aid to effective advertising.

By seasonable advertising is meant advertising that is brought out just when the minds of people turn naturally to the goods advertised. Thus, the housewife is more susceptible to peaches and glass jars in the canning season than any other time. She is more susceptible to the mincemeat advertising as the Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner events draw near.

When you run over the list of things that people buy regularly it will be seen that there is a wonderfully big list of things to which the seasonable idea can be made to apply. Just think, for example, of the goods that people usually buy in the Fall.

With a little ingenuity goods that don't at first look to be seasonable can be made so. For example, a shoe store found itself at midsummer with a good-sized stock of fairly heavy shoes. The stock was gone over and a good part of it exploited as "vacation shoes"—shoes that would stand mountain climbing, fishing trips, etc., and the sale rode along well on the vacation spirit.

Long ago merchants used to stop advertising during the Summer. Of late years they have not done so. Some thinking man once made up a list of the things that people are more likely to buy during the Summer, and it made clear the fact that the man who drops out of advertising for any considerable length of time loses many opportunities to get in seasonable appeals that would swell profits.

Said an inexperienced partner to an old advertiser: "We might use space every other day if a daily advertisement runs into too much money." "But," replied the experienced man, "the people read the newspapers every day."

The announcements of new goods, new styles, etc., may be properly called seasonable advertising. It is not reasonable to say that only women are interested in such things. The average man may not read as much of this class of advertising as women, but he wants to keep informed and is ever open to impressions.

PHONE GIRLS PROTEST RATS AT EXCHANGE

Boston telephone girls have enough subjects before their union now to keep them deliberating overtime. They include:

Complaint of rats in Dorchester exchange building.

Plans for parading Labor Day.

Choosing a new hall to meet in.

Fighting for vindication of Miss Coyle, president of the girls' union in Worcester, who was suspended for an alleged infraction of the rules.

Protest over Back Bay exchange subordinates.

The rats at the Dorchester union are not those one wears, but those one sees, the girls explain.

International Vice-President Bugniazet reported on conditions at Worcester and South Framingham. It was said the girls at Worcester will fight for the vindication of Miss Coyle, and that the matron at the Worcester exchange, through whom Miss Coyle is trouble around, had resigned.

As a result of the vote of the Worcester girls not to accept the suspension of Miss Coyle and appeal of the case to President Spaulding, it was announced the report of the matter has been turned over to President Spaulding who will give his final report about August 3.

SMITH TO QUIT ENGLAND AND RETURN HOME

By JACK CONWAY.

"GUNBOAT" SMITH, disgusted by Georges Carpentier's persistency in refusing to meet him in a return bout until late in October, has very nearly sailed for home. He decided to return to this country after the international campaign which he is now in will terminate with the defeat of Jack Johnson for a bantamweight championship of the world. The gunner believes that his chances of defeating his conqueror is a better one when the latter is a little the worse for wear and tear, and the only white man who has a chance of winning from Johnson.

Smith's European trip has been a keen disappointment to both himself and even Jeanette, his manager. They received $10,000 to see Carpentier but lost a chance to get a match with Johnson for the time being, at least.

If Smith had won from Carpentier he would now be the centre of the boxing world. His services would be in demand by promoters in every land where the glove game is fostered. He would have Johnson cornered and the negro would be forced to give him recognition or else admit that he was afraid of the supposedly limbed American with the deadly punch.

SMITH will not experience much trouble in securing matches when he returns to this country. Jess Willard, Jim Coffey and the rest of the white aspirants to the title will get a bout with Jim Buckley's protege. Carl Morris will also probably get a chance to be recorded challenger when he lands in this country. Morris is not the greatest fighter in the world, but he is a husky lad and an idea that he was Smith's master.

SAM LANGFORD would also not have to go on an offer to a contest with Smith, which is a probability that these two will clash in another bout at the Atlas A. A. is September-October, a greater knockout than a month's training dulls the edge of his little old hammerlight division blow, makes him one of the most dangerous boxers of his weight in the country.

CHARLEY GOLDMAN, the New York lightweight sensation, will be given a chance to clash with Al Shubert of New Bedford in one of the four ten-round bouts at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night to be one of the busiest boxing nights in the history of the club. Goldman has engaged in 300 battles, which is a remarkable record for any boxer. He has fought Johnny Dundee, Jack Williams, Frankie Burns and all the other stars in the bantamweight division.

In Shubert the New Bedford boy will meet one of the classiest little men in the East. The New Bedford boy has made a fine record in his contests in New England rings and his aggressive style of fighting, coupled with his ability to land a knockout blow, makes him one of the most dangerous boxers of his weight in the country.

DAN "PORKY" FLYNN is back in the dear old West End again after his trip to the Commonwealth. He fought Battling Levinsky. Flynn declares that he won from Levinsky, regardless of the decision, and that the contrary. His representatives have registered a protest with the New York Boxing Commissioner, and the so-called "telephone decision" in other words, those intoxicated in Flynn claim that the New York newspaper writers did not bother to "cover" the contest themselves, but relied upon the reports sent in from Kearney's manager. This may be true, and then again, it may not, as stranger things have been pulled off in New York in the past, and we have not been informed of any underworld movement hitting the big city.

THE writer's attack upon English fairness in deciding ring bouts and the lack of real good fighters in England has called forth a host of boosters of Jimmy Bell to take their turn. Bell has proved to be a lot of pugilistic good writing about with well-worded sentences telling of the wonderful British boxers. Have boxers ever accomplished to the past. It is almost useless to say that the letter writers have not been with the writer and that they did not put their names to print when discussing the relative merits of their favorite servant.

BUT, regardless of the avalanche of letters in hand, we are not worrying a great deal about the matter, for whom it may concern that the only way an American boxer can win an English decision is by the knockout, the landing a knockout, and also that England has been represented by a real fighter for many years. Some of the boosters, on the other hand, have always been of the opinion that in other countries in this country. One unfortunate writer informs me that I am penned at a certain Boston club, and even victories over Americans in many cases by this particular scribbler is way off if he knows what he says a decision. American athletes have been defeated in England many times and in such decisive manner that we are charitable enough to call it a draw, and we do in a few of their international contests.

Results of Matches for Shepard Trophy

Only two matches of the first round of match play for the John Shepard, Jr., trophy are yet to be played, six having been finished, two of which were played several days after the result of the other four matches follow:

At the Country Club, Brookline—A. MacMillan, Brae-Burn, beat Randolph Tucker, Essex County, by 3 and 2.

At the Wollaston G. C.—F. A. Hartwell, Oakley, beat A. M. Blake, Tedesco, by 2 and 1.

At Marblehead—S. Lockwood, Belmont Spring, beat E. W. Daley, Oakley, by 4 and 2.

At Tedesco—P. Tewksbury, Woodland, beat A. H. Goodale, Wollaston, by 3 and 1.

M'LOUGHLIN SHOWS HE IS IN FORM TO DEFEND DAVIS CUP BY GREAT LONGWOOD GAME

MATCHES TODAY.

Longwood Singles.

M. E. McLoughlin vs. A. S. Dabney.
F. B. Alexander vs. R. N. Williams, 2d.
E. Fottrell vs. H. L. Murray.
G. T. Putnam vs. W. F. Johnson.

Eastern Doubles Championship.

H. H. Hackett and F. B. Alexander vs. W. J. Clothier and G. P. Gardner.

By FRED HOEY.

The remarkable tennis display by Maurice E. McLoughlin, the national champion, in his winning game with Thomas Dabney, of Los Angeles yesterday showed that the title holder had improved to his all-around form [illegible] in the [illegible] preserve, enabled the McLoughlin game to win with an accuracy of [illegible]. Dabney has played consistent tennis in the east but it is hoped to figure where he has a chance against the coast star.

Next Monday, Nov. 29, found N. M. Washburn a keen opponent and the two boys battled for four sets before succumbing. The one for Williams qualifies him for today's round with F. B. Alexander of New York as his opponent.

PARTNER VS. PARTNER.

Partner against Partner in the singles championship is the run for Eastern tennis in the Longwood tourney. McLoughlin was chosen to play Bundy, his doubles partner, and the card today finds Ellis Fottrell playing against his doubles pal, R. Lindsay Murray.

With Fottrell and Murray slated for singles competition this afternoon their play in the doubles will be carried over to Monday.

Meanwhile Hackett and Alexander will play W. J. Clothier and G. P. Gardner, Jr., today and the winning team will meet the coast boys Monday.

Pressure of business and the fact that Dabney is scheduled for singles today caused a shift in the doubles match between Dabney and Niles and Pell and Behr. They will meet Monday afternoon.

TRAINER TO DIET MEN.

Walter Stanley, the new trainer of the Longwood tennis gang, gave the members of the squad a [illegible] ing missed last year. Trainer Mack is mapping out a diet course for the players, and when they begin practice at Westchester every will be in strict training.

G. F. Brown of the Longwood Cricket Club takes great delight in following the work of the California plans. Mr. Brown is a strong advocate of the new school of tennis.

Instead of using the body with the required [illegible] it is Mr. Brown's contention that a player is more effective when he uses just the arm.

According to Mr. Brown, the Doherty brothers of England developed this style under Burke, the Irish professional.

ALGER WINNER OVER CARRIGAN IN BERLIN GO

BERLIN, N. H., July 25.—George Alger of Lawrence was awarded the decision on points over William Carrigan of Boston at the Armory Athletic Club here after 15 rounds.

Carrigan may box Alger for another match and if this accepted and the two men will meet August 7 before the same club.

The preliminary bout scheduled to go eight rounds between Gendron and Johnson, two local boxers, ended in the first session in a decisive win for the former.

Somerville Rivals Clash on Diamond

The best game in the Somerville City League of the season is expected this afternoon when the Somerville A. C. and the Somerville Athletic Club City Field Series. The A. A. C. team is leading the league, but the Athletics have been passing good ball during the last few days and are only down in the standing by a few very close games. The battles, one by a wild pitch and another by a questionable decision, is now under protest. Pike will twirl for the Athletics and Somerville for the A. A. C.

Fenway A. A. Meets Braintree White Sox

The Fenway A. A. will go to South Braintree this afternoon to battle Ralph Newcomb's White Sox, and a hard game is anticipated. The Fenway team is composed of the best high school players of the past few seasons, and with a star battery has been making the best teams battle this season. Bill Ross, the strikeout king, will pitch for the South Braintree team, with Simmons catching.

LAKE FOREST, Ill., July 25.—Australia's great tennis team, with Norman Brookes and Anthony Wilding as its mainstays, earned the right to meet the German team at Pittsburgh next week in the contest for the Davis Cup.

Brookes and Wilding both thrilled the crowd with their splendid service, but it was the frequent volleying that furnished most of the exciting incidents.

Next week, at Pittsburgh, the Australasians will meet the German representatives in a series for the privilege of playing the British team.

Exhibition matches will be played today by Schwengers against Wilding and by Brookes against Powell.

In an exhibition match S. N. Doust and W. Bolton, the Australian substitutes, won from Walter Thayer and J. H. Winston of Chicago by a score of 6—3, 6—4, 6—2.

CANADIANS ARE SECOND BEST TO AUSTRALASIANS

Marsans Comes Back.

HAVANA, July 25.—Armando Marsans, the Cuban baseball player, who left the Cincinnati National League team and joined the St. Louis Federal League team, but who was enjoined from playing with the Federals, has returned to the United States.

Over the Plate

By NICK FLATLEY.

MATHAP the Braves have not stirred up some excitement by their great dash along the road. We met a man today who has already written Owner Gaffney asking for reservations for the World's Series games on the South End grounds. At that, there are a lot of fans around Boston who think the Braves are more than an outside possibility for the flag. They sure have been going at a pennant clip on the road, anyway.

• • •

PECULIARLY enough, the Brooklyn outfit, tailenders and all, have been the worst obstacle in the Braves' path all season. The Dodgers have stopped the Flatbush speeders on eleven separate occasions. Next in order come the Giants and Phillies, who have each eight victories over the South Enders this season. The western teams are hardly in the hunt at all. Cincinnati has won six times, St. Louis five, while three victories are the extent of the Pirate and Cub assaults on the Boston fortress.

• • •

COMPARISONS may be odious, but it's a safe bet that Bill Sweeney, onetime Brave, and John Evers, present member of the tribe, will be God's own great care in the next few days. So far as the averages go Johnny has a fairly good edge on the well-known insurance agent, but reports from the West play up William as a big factor in the Cubs' present high position. The same holds good for the Troy individual. Each will surely work the head off in the present series to prove that he was not the goat in the big deal.

• • •

IF big Jim Vaughn did not have to face the Braves now and then he would be leading the National circuit hurlers just about this time. The husky Cub has won thirteen thus far this season and dropped four, of the four, tired find the Braves on the winning end. So far as the pennant chance of the Stallings-ites this particular pitcher is ready and willing to announce to all and sundry that the Boston outfit is the toughest bunch in the circuit.

• • •

PERHAPS nine straight for the Athletics, with a good sprinkling of shutouts thrown in for good measure, has not caused the folks who have been shouting about the week Mack hurling staff to sit up and take notice. Bender, Plank, Bush, Shawkey and Pennock are all apparently better than ever, while Wyckoff is getting along wonderfully in the rescue role. With Big Jack Coombs looming up strong as a dependable starter for the Athletics, Mr. McGillicuddy should worry. The old Colby star outlasted yesterday against Syracuse that he is pretty near right again. You may recall he was once on a time some pitcher.

White Sox Purchase Altman, Big Hitter

GRAND FORKS, N. D., July 25.—The Chicago White Sox after for John Altman, left fielder of the Grand Forks Northern League Club, was accepted today.

Altman is batting .318 for fifty-six games, being a consistent hitter and steady slicker. His record for three years' batting is above .300. Altman goes to the Sox August 15.

BIG CARNIVAL OF SPORT TODAY FOR THE I.A.A.A.

The Irish American Athletic Association holds its first track and field meet at Locust street grounds, South Boston, today.

The program includes a dozen track and field events, wrestling, baseball and Gaelic football. Stars in each branch of sport will compete.

The first event will be the baseball game between the James A. Sullivan and Francis J. Horgan teams, after which the track and field sports will take place.

Many of the running events are being held on the track, the wrestling contestants at the contested inside the circle, after which two Gaelic football teams, representing the provinces of Munster and Connaught, will engage in combat.

Charlie Rice, the New England intercollegiate champion sprinter, who represents the Irish American Club, will be the star spinner.

The attempts of Edsey H. Clark, the former all-around champion, to come back, and the endeavor of John Lawlor, who wears the winged shield emblem of the I. A. A. A., to make a record with the eight-pound shot will be interesting.

Colored Boxers Star at Cambridge Club

Duke Fuller and Allen Terry, colored boxers, put up the feature bout at the University A. C. At the end of six bounds Fuller got the award.

Joe Morgan, of Mansfield, and Ed Mullin of Quincy went six rounds and Morgan got the award. Eddie Flynn of Lynn had no trouble winning the decision over Jack Coyne of New York in their 12 round bout.

There were two substitutes in the final bout, Joselin of New York met Belgian Brown. The latter was in no shape and in the sixth round Brown's second threw the towel in the ring.

British Davis Cup Players Are Landed

NEW YORK, July 25.—The British tennis team, which will compete for the Dwight F. Davis international trophy, landed early today from the steamship Baltic.

The team comprises J. C. Parke, captain; A. H. Lowe, T. M. Mottram, date and A. R. F. Kingscote.

By winning against France in the preliminary round at Wimbledon, July 14, Great Britain gained the right of meeting the winner of the Australasian-Canadian-German matches in this country.

Cornell Club Holds 'Wash' at Squantum

The Cornell Club of New England will hold its annual "wash" at Squantum tomorrow afternoon and close to one hundred Cornell men of New England will participate in the annual event. A baseball game between odds and evens will open the entertainment, followed by the "wash," which in reality resembles a drowning party. At 7 p. m. dinner is served and during the evening an entertainment is provided.

Court Ruling for Feds.

CHICAGO, July 25.—Judge Baker of the Federal Court has refused a petition of the Cincinnati Nationals that he grant a stay of dissolution of the injunction restraining Pitcher Johnson from playing with the Kansas City Federals. Judge Pooll has dissolved the injunction and there is now no legal impediment to Johnson's playing.

PYNCHON TELLS WHY DEFIANCE QUIT CUP RACES

NEW YORK, July 25.—George M. Pynchon, managing owner of the cup race contender Defiance, has announced that the Defiance has been withdrawn from the trial races because of structural defects which made it unsafe to sail her under a sail area big enough to send her forward fast enough to beat the other yachts.

Although they do not say so, the owners of Defiance have reached the conclusion that Resolute is the fastest boat ever built in America and that it would have been a waste of time to continue racing against her with the risk risking the lives of the sailors in each race, because the hull of Defiance is not sufficiently stable to carry her fresh and mainmouth sails.

Mr. Pynchon, George D. Barron of Rye, and several other owners of the Defiance, declared there was no truth in the rumors of dissatisfaction on the part of the owners of the Defiance.

They said everyone of them had the utmost confidence in Skipper Howell and Designer Crouch of Herreshoff's. They held a banquet to testify their perfect satisfaction with the boat two nights ago when they unanimously sent the New York Yacht Club the notification of Defiance's withdrawal from the trials.

The boat is now at City Island and will be dismantled. In spite of her handsome, seaworthy decks and perfect furnishings, she may be turned into a summer plying between New York and Boston.

Burned Out Club to Use New Field

MONTREAL, July 25.—The Montreal baseball team of the International League will use the field of the Montreal Amateur Athletic League Association at Westmount until a new grandstand is erected at Atlantic water Park in place of the one destroyed by fire. An announcement to this effect was made today by the secretary of the club.

Red Sox After Two Lowell Club Stars

Jimmy Ring and Joe Burke, two Brooklyn boys, are playing great ball for the Lowell team of the New England League, and several big league teams have put in a bid for their services. The Boston Red Sox have offered $12,000 to the Lowell club for the two players. Ring is a pitcher and Burke a third baseman.

Shamrock Wireless Reports All Well

AT SEA, July 25.—The Erin and the Shamrock IV. are now in latitude 45 degrees, 37 minutes west, longitude 4 degrees, 41 minutes north. The weather is fine and the wind moderate. The challenger sailed 222 nautical miles in the last twenty-four hours. All are well.

TRIUMPHANT BRAVES BACK HOME AGAIN

Home again are the triumphing Braves. Hats off with three ringing cheers and a tiger. Everybody out to Gaffney Park today to add zest to the welcome!

Last night they arrived, bringing their laurels behind them. They practically cleaned up, on their Western trip, so let the joy of the fans be unconfined.

Their scalps number an even dozen—count 'em—for they're all there. Out of sixteen games they lost but four. Like the Red Sox, they're climbing upward, so why shouldn't all the rooting cohorts be happy?

FACE CUBS IN OPENER TODAY.

Today on the South End grounds they face Hank O'Day's Cubs. From present indications it looks as if it will be Walpole street's record-breaking day in attendance. Undoubtedly the ropes will have to be stretched across the outfield to accommodate the excess throngs.

'Twas a famous trip indeed, this Western tour from which the Braves have returned. It was the most remarkable road trip in the history of the Boston Nationals of recent days. And their wind up with four blanks in the Pirate series establishes a National League record.

Just as the Red Sox snugly settled themselves in second place in the Americans, so have the Bravs taken a firm grip on fourth niche in the National League race. The work of the Braves is a tribute not only to the whole team, but particularly to their pitching staff.

There's Bill James and there's Dick Rudolph and there's George Tyler. Bill with a clear slate of four games won and none lost; Dick ditto with three to his good and none to the bad, and George with three to his credit and a single loss.

Counting the two games they won from Brooklyn just before they went west, the Braves netted fourteen wins out of the last eighteen games they have played. And the result is that the home-coming team is full of the cayenne for the future.

Just compare the big jumps taken by the Red Sox and the Braves due to very recent exploits.

The Sox won nine out of the last fourteen games played at Fenway Park and stepped up next to the top rung of the ladder.

And through their valiant work the Braves vaulted upward from the tail-end to fourth position—the first time in twelve years they have been in the first division in July.

"Keep a-moving ahead" is the slogan in both Boston camps.

STARTED ON THE CUBS.

Through and through, the trip of the Braves was simply wonderful. When they started west July 6 after taking a double-header from the Trolley-Dodgers, they were in last place with a percentage of .412. This was exactly the same percentage they had on the same day last year.

But how different the story that followed—this July 6!

The Braves drew three out of the four games with Chicago. They followed suit in Cincinnati and in St. Louis. They won three straight from Cincinnati, and then played a four inning 1 to 1 tie.

Came next Pittsburgh, the climax of their trip. Winning the first game in the Smoky City they got into sixth place, won the second game and found themselves in the first division.

They won the first of the double-header at Pittsburgh Wednesday, lost the second, 4 to 3, and Thursday administered another coat of whitewash to the Dreyfuss band.

Their Pittsburgh victories were all shutouts—1 to 0, 6 to 0, 1 to 0, and 2 to 0. They shut the Pirates out in forty-three of the forty-six innings played in that city. Take it from Manager Stallings, it was brilliant work.

And the work of the pitchers:

On July 9, James defeated Chicago, 8 to 1, allowing six hits; July 13 he defeated St. Louis, 8 to 7, allowing five hits in six innings. Rudolph finishing out the 12-inning game. On July 17, James defeated Cincinnati, 6 to 3, being hit four times; on July 19 he pitched the last inning against Cincinnati without allowing a hit, and on July 22 he defeated Pittsburgh, 1 to 0, allowing eight hits in eleven innings.

RUDOLPH'S GREAT WORK.

Now take Dick Rudolph. On July 11 he defeated Chicago, 5 to 2, allowing six hits, and two days later he relieved James and pitched six innings of a 12-inning game, allowing seven hits. The Bostons won, 8 to 7. On July 18, he defeated Cincinnati, 6 to 3, allowing seven hits, and on July 21 defeated Pittsburgh, 6 to 0, allowing three hits.

And George Tyler. On July 8, he defeated Chicago, 7 to 4, allowing eleven hits; on the 12th, pitched three innings against St. Louis, allowing three hits and three runs, on the 14th he lost to St. Louis, 3 to 2, allowing eight hits. On July 20 he defeated Pittsburgh, 1 to 0, allowing four hits, and three days later defeated the Pirates again, 2 to 0, allowing five hits.

On the trip Otto Hess lost two games, Crutcher lost one and won one, and Strand won one and lost none.

All in all, it was "great stuff" as the fans are saying. So much so that certain managers are admitting the Braves will make the not sixth in the National League. And as for the "fans," well, they seem to be confident the home aggregation is fated to keep on climbing.

CUBS STRENGTHENED.

In the grapple with the Cubs today, the Chicagoans will present a strengthened infield. Claude Derrick, who was secured from Cincinnati in trade for Fred Mollwitz, will be at short. O'Day will have with him his entire playing list, including Jimmy Archer, who was injured in Brooklyn six weeks ago and who will be here. Besides Derrick, the new men with the visitors are Casey Hageman, formerly with the Red Sox, and Johnny Bates.

Though they have gotten the tar end of the stick in the three series they have already played here, O'Day and Bill Sweeney—well remembered in Boston, of course—and the rest of the Cub fold say they will make it nip and tuck in the South End this time.

Undoubtedly it will be a top-line battle this afternoon, and it will be no wonder at all if that capacity crowd will storm the Gaffney gates to see the fight.

Reds Return Erwin to Brooklyn Club

CINCINNATI, July 25.—Announcement was made that Infielder John Rawlings and Outfielder Maurice Uhler, of the Cincinnati National League Club, were released to the Minneapolis Club of the American Association as a part of a deal for Outfielder Killifer, who will join the Reds later.

In addition Pitcher John Rowan is sold to Dayton of the Central League and Outfielder La Ross was sent back to Battle Creek, whence he came. Catcher Erwin, who was obtained from the Brooklyn National League Club, will be returned to that club.

RED SOX OPEN 4-GAME SERIES AGAINST NAPS

CLEVELAND, O., July 25.—The climbing Carrigans are in town. They are here for four games with the Naps. Last time they came they wiped the platter clean. They act like they intended to do the same thing right over again this time.

Before they were in fourth place. Today they occupy second. Then they had a bunch of cripples in the squad. Today every man of the twenty is fit as a fiddle. Steve Yerkes limps a bit, but he could go in and play if need be. However, with Hoolihan to cover first and Janvrin second, the outfit is not at all slowed up.

Joe Wood, who has been ailing of late, is the old smoke star again. He's due to pitch the first game. When he's right he whoops 'em along with a wallop. He's right now and consequently it looks like cyclone cellars for the Naps.

In fact the Sox are rockier than ever. It makes a great difference to second with a clear title. When they were third today, fourth tomorrow and second the day after, they had more than the lead to worry about. Now, however, they can sit back and realize that the only obstacle in the path to glory are the Philadelphia team. Some bunker, of course, with a six and a half game lead, but a long spell of games stretches ahead.

After a quick jump through the West the speeding Sox return home for a good long stand. They realize that a happy hike through the hills will put them in an advantageous position that only the end of the season will settle matters definitely.

So, from Manager Carrigan down to the new additions to the tribe from Baltimore, one and all are anxious to start in today with the battered Braisdingbums, and get the ball rolling after they trek the battle ordure likely to give sterner fight before being catered.

Joe Wood is slated to man the hurling bill today. Sir Joseph, according to all advance information, is himself. He has always been a tough nut for the Sox to crack, and that his team has the fever that sent it along the line with such calamitous results for all concerned a couple of seasons back, he is perhaps framed up better than ever for a drive.

Vean Gregg or Mitchell will probably be chased out by Birmingham to try and stem the invading attack.

Day of Accidents at Troy Race Meet

TROY, N. Y., July 25.—Two drivers and two horses sustained injuries in a series of accidents which lent excitement to the second day of the Metropolitan circuit races.

La Copia fell and Eddie Fay went over her. Edward Hollenbeck, driver of Eddie Fay, sustained two broken legs and other injuries. Charlie Grover of La Copia, was also lost seriously injured, though cut and bruised.

Several of the horses ran away, and La Copia and Eddie Fay collided with one another, the latter receiving a cut in its breast and probably being fatally injured.

Chief Justice ran away two and three-quarter miles in the third heat of the 2:14 pace, following a collision in which the sulky was demolished, but Driver Keegan escaped injured.

Cement and Canvas Yacht Launched at Dorchester Today

A novel craft, the latest in yacht construction, being done in cement and covered with canvas, is launched today from the premises of the Savin Hill Yacht Club, Dorchester.

The craft is forty feet long, carries an emergency rig, and her owners, Monroe & Whiting, have been about three years getting things in shape for a round-the-world cruise.

Cement boats are a novelty in this part of the country and the method of construction in the present case might be termed composite.

Practically all work on the little vessel has been done evenings and holidays. The proposed cruise will be taken leisurely, it being the intention of the owners to spend considerable time in port.

Ouimet and Partner Again on Losing End

YORK HARBOR, Me., July 25.—Francis Ouimet and W. D. Vanderpool of Garden City, national champions in the Metropolitan championship, were defeated 1 up four-ball match at the York County Club here by Tom McNamara of Boston and A. D. Young of the local country club by a score of 3 up.

Ouimet played a fine game through the fairway, but his putting was wretched and his 27 for the round included about ten misses of two short putts. McNamara had a round of 72, which is good going.

Marshall Wins Out in Chess Tourney

MANNHEIM, July 25.—In the fifth round of the international chess tournament, played here today, Marshall, Duras, Tarrasch, Post, Bandelow, Alechine and Janowski scored respectively from John, Fahrni, Mieses, Krueger, Flamberg, Breyer, Carls and Tartakower. Sidelnadi and Vidmar drew.

The leading scores to date are: Spielmann, 4½ games; Post, Bell, Duras, Vidmar and Bandelow, each 3½; Alechine, Janowski and Marshall, each 2½.

Golf Finals Today for Shawnee Cup

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE, Pa., July 25.—John N. Stockton, of Nassau and Princeton, meets Reginald S. Worthington of the home club, in the 36-hole final round for the Buckwood trophy in the Sawnee Country Club's golf tournament today.

New Mile Record for Frank Bogash in Big Line Races

CLEVELAND, O., July 25.—Thomas Murphy's Frank Bogash, Jr., paced a mile in 1:57½, three-quarters of a second under Williams' mile of Tuesday at the getaway meeting here.

This again broke the North Randall track record and was the fastest mile paced this year. The feat was accomplished in the first heat of the championship pacing sweepstakes, which Frank Bogash, Jr., won in two straight heats.

Ella Mackay captured first money in the 2:14 pace, winning the fourth and last two heats.

Guy Nello took the 2:21 class trotting event in three straight heats. The 2:12 class trot went to Lucy Patchen, while the 2:06 class pace, was taken by Our Colonel.

Police Crusade to Stop Pool Selling

HARTFORD, July 25.—The crusade against baseball pools in this city is being pushed by the police, and a number of additional arrests are being made daily. In some cases hundreds of tickets have been found upon some of the men arrested. It is understood that the Hartford Eastern Association club is enthusiastic in back of the movement to eliminate the baseball pool industry.

City to Hold First Summer Meet Today

The first of the Summer track meets at the Boston Public Latin grounds, under the auspices of the Parks and Recreation Department, will be held this afternoon at the Strandway Playgrounds, South Boston, and Instructor Johnny Driscoll of the grounds has received a large number of entries. Events will be held in the junior, intermediate and senior divisions and many good performances are expected.

Boxer Wins in Court.

CINCINNATI, July 25.—Mike Schrost, well-known heavyweight, was discharged in Squire Dill's court at Reading, after a hearing on the charge of shooting with intent to kill. The magistrate held that the evidence given was of a conflicting nature and did not sustain the charge.

STATE LEAGUE CRICKET TEAMS CLASH TODAY

THE STANDING.

	Won.	Lost.	Tie.	P.C.

Watchusett	1	4	0	.200
Standards	1	4	0	.200
Cambridge	1	4	0	.200
Everett	0	5	0	.000

The Massachusetts State Cricket League will finish the first half of its season today with the following schedule of matches:

Brockton vs. Canton at Brockton.
Everett vs. Standards at Everett.
Lawrence vs. Beverly at Lawrence.
Beverly Blues vs. St. George at Beverly.
Wanderers vs. Needham at Franklin Field.
Athletics vs. Caribbeans at Franklin Field.

To date Needham is in first place, having been defeated but once at the hands of the strong St. George team. Beverly, champions of the league for the past two years, occupies second position, the loss against them by the league leaders being the victor's only defeat.

Interest today will be centred on the result of the match between Beverly and Needham. Should the latter lose, and Brockton and St. George come through with wins, it would then occupy fourth position.

The matches scheduled for Brockton at 2:30 appear very easy, and unless the unexpected happens the home team will win their games.

These two teams, playing to form, will undoubtedly make some trouble for the leaders. Unfortunately, St. George does not meet Beverly.

Should the last two games, their opponents could not retire the side and with added batting strength, supplied with the strong bowling of Dashiell, Roe, Marks and others, the latter should go to them.

Bluejacket, Cherokee Pitcher, Joins Giants

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., July 25.—Jim Bluejacket, the Cherokee Indian pitcher of the Bloomington Three-I League team, who won his twelfth straight game yesterday, was sold to the New York Giants today to report August 15.

Charlie Jackson, left fielder, also was sold to the Giants to report next season, and Pitcher Fred Merkle was sold to the Cleveland Americans to report August 15.

Offer for Meehan.

George Meehan, the weaver of the sea-horse emblem of the Brooklyn baseball Club, who has been in the limelight last Sunday by winning the race to Sandy Hook, was today received an invitation to compete in a 25-mile motor-boat race on the Mississippi River on Labor Day.

5 IN 50-MILE RACE TONIGHT AT BEACH OVAL

RACING PROGRAM.

Golden wheel race, behind motors, 50 miles—Didier, Wiley, Carman, Moran, Mitten.

Two-mile amateur handicap—Australian pursuit race for professionals, five-mile open for amateurs, one-mile invitation for amateurs and one-mile professional.

The Golden wheel race, of 50 miles, with five men competing, the biggest event of the season, will be run off at the Revere cycle track tonight and the bike fans will for the first time in many months, be given an opportunity of seeing the best men in the motor-paced game in action.

The riders who will battle for honors in this event are George Wiley, American middle-distance champion; Leon Didier, French titleholder; Worth Mitten of Iowa, Clarence Carman of Jamaica and Jimmy Moran of Chelsea.

Every one of this quintet of riders is now traveling at his best form, and as all are good over the long route it will be a hard battle from the gun for the glory of winning this event.

Those who saw Wednesday's race between Wiley, Didier and Carman will not miss the chance to see this trio again. That event looked like the best ever until an unlooked for happening put Wiley and Carman out of the running and left Didier to finish the race an easy winner.

Wiley and Carman are out for the Frenchman's measure, but the fact that the latter covered forty-two miles and two laps in an hour's time on last Saturday night makes it look as though his two Yankee rivals will have to cut out a terrific pace.

Mitten and Moran are also after a victory. This pair has been fairly consistent at fifty miles. Mitten, it will be remembered, led for forty-one miles in the big championship race at Revere last August, which was won by Wiley.

A good card of professional and amateur races have been arranged and will be run off in connection with the big event.

THEIR MARRIED LIFE

Helen and Warren Go by Boat to a Summer Resort

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service

WARREN was almost asleep in the upper berth before Helen was ready to turn out the light in her stateroom. She loved to travel, but was always fastidious, so it took her some time to prepare for bed. She undressed slowly and hung her traveling suit carefully on a hook, with her shirtwaist—a dark blue chiffon one—beside it. Long after she was ready for sleep there were several little things to tend to; a button had dropped from her pump as she had taken it off, and she stopped to sew it on, knowing that everything would be rushed in the morning; and she was just closing her traveling bag when Warren growled sleepily:

"What on earth are you doing?"

"Dear, I'm so sorry, I thought you had fallen asleep long ago," and Helen, conscience-stricken at keeping the light burning right in Warren's eyes, turned it off.

She was very tired and almost asleep when she remembered that she had not put her watch under her pillow. If Warren hadn't remembered to tell the steward to call them they might oversleep and be taken out of their way. Their tickets wouldn't be good either, tought she to wake Warren and ask him if he had remembered, or would it be simpler to get up and find her watch and then trust to waking up? She remembered putting her watch in her bag; it would only take a moment to get it. She remembered having hung her bag over the arm of the chair, and feeling her way carefully across the room she found the chair and her bag without any trouble and felt around for her watch.

THE WATCH VANISHES

There was a faint light from the corridor shining in the transom over the door, so she wasn't entirely in the dark, but her watch certainly wasn't in the handbag. She sat down on the edge of the chair and dumped the contents out on her lap. There was a tiny purse for change, a pencil, a lip stick, a small box of powder and a handkerchief, but no watch.

Helen stared blankly around the room and then at the articles on her lap. Could she have lost the watch or could anyone have taken it? No, she had taken it off in the stateroom just a little while previous, and she had intended to put it in her bag and evidently hadn't. But where had she put it? If she lost that watch she would never forgive herself. It had been a present from her father on her eighteenth birthday.

Cautiously she stood up and began to feel around on the little shelf near the window. She might have put it there. With a little snap of relief she found it, but her fingers hit a glass, which balanced for a moment perilously on the edge of the shelf and then fell with a clatter.

"Who's there?" growled Warren from his berth.

Helen was chattering from the cold and, clutching the watch in one hand, she made her way to bed.

"Haven't you gone to bed yet? That's right; stay up fussing around till all hours of the night and then grumble because you haven't had enough sleep."

"Dear, I got up to get my watch. I thought perhaps you had forgotten to leave word with the steward about waking us, and I can always wake up if I have my watch under the pillow."

"Of course I told the steward to wake us. Why didn't you wake me up instead of crawling around and dropping things and scaring a person out of a year's growth?"

"I'm sorry, dear. I hated to wake you and I thought I could get the watch without making any noise."

"Huh, that's the chance you'd have of finding anything in the dark without making the dickens of a racket. I'm glad you got what you wanted," and Warren relapsed into silence.

SHE WONDERS ABOUT THE PLACE

Helen was wide awake now, and she began to wonder what the place would be like. Carrie and her husband had stayed there all last season and had recommended it very highly, and Warren had suddenly decided to run up there for a week-end and see for himself whether it would be a good place to spend a vacation. An island off the coast sounded rather nice, and Helen was only keeping to have the chance of staying at a hotel for the summer. Camping out did not appeal to her in the least.

She lay for a long time listening to the water lapping against the side of the boat. She wished now that she had taken the upper berth. She wasn't sleepy and it would have been fun to look out. Warren had asked her which she preferred, and she had said the lower without thinking that the port hole was situated in the upper berth.

She drew up the covers with a little shiver; the air was getting very damp in the room. Suddenly a fog horn began to blow, and she started violently—it sounded so near. A heavy fog had evidently come in, for the horn blew at regular intervals, and Helen, dozing off, started awake with every discordant shriek. She wondered vaguely if Warren could sleep with all the racket going on, and almost immediately he growled out:

"How do they expect any one to sleep with that infernal racket going on?"

"There must be a bad fog—don't you notice how damp the room is?"

"These staterooms are always damp—a few doesn't make any difference—a lot you know about it anyway!"

Helen was silent. Some one passing out in the corridor stopped outside their door for a moment and Helen raised herself on her elbow to listen.

"Suppose you thought it was some one coming to steal that watch," Warren remarked, sarcastically. "Next time I take a night boat you bet I'll see that our stateroom isn't right under the fog horn. I'll pick out a clear night, too."

"But, dear, it might be clear when we leave and still be foggy when we are out a way; it was perfectly clear when we came on board tonight!"

WARREN GRUMBLES AGAIN

"Well, we can get a stateroom on the other side of the boat, anyway, I don't expect to sleep a wink."

Helen sighed wearily; with the fog-horn still blowing harshly, she dropped into a doze. It seemed a long time later when she woke up, conscious that the noise had stopped. She could hear voices outside and the sound of people walking, but it was still dark, too dark to see what time it was by her watch.

Warren had evidently dropped asleep, too, for she could hear regular breathing in the upper berth, and, as she wondered where they were, the huge boat pushed off and was again under way. Too sleepy to care where they were, she again dropped off, and the next time she woke up dawn was stealing into the room.

With a cautious move toward the end of the berth she pulled out her watch and saw that it was nearly a quarter to five. Their train went at six twenty, and unless she wanted to make Warren she would have to be still a little longer. It was light enough in the room now to see everything though. Perhaps she could dress quietly and steal out on deck; it was so tiresome lying there and waiting the time to pass. What a long night it had been, she thought, as she stretched and yawned and then slipped carefully out of bed and began to get into her clothes.

"Well, what do you think you're doing?" said Warren so suddenly that Helen dropped the soap and had to get down on her hands and knees to find it.

"I thought I'd dress and go out on deck for some air. Did you sleep at all, dear?"

"Sleep? I should say not; never put in such a night. What with that horn blowing and you dropping everything around the room I'd like to know how I could get any sleep."

Helen finished her dressing in silence.

"I'll go on deck till you're ready, dear, I think the air will do me good."

"All right, I'll be out in a jiffy. A good breakfast with some strong coffee will set me up as well as anything.

Tom Sends a Long Telegram to Edith and Hopes She Will Understand

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER IX.

THERE are two kinds of love that a man may feel for his betrothed: one kind has in its very nature a calm certainty of complete trust on the part of the woman. The man knows that she has absolute faith in him and that no chance circumstances can shatter that faith.

She would have to be convinced by her own sight of his indifference or infidelity before she would doubt him.

The other kind of love—and this is perhaps the more common—is accompanied by a hope that the woman will understand, a wish that she may believe in her sweetheart—but there is always the tormenting possibility that if circumstantial evidence were against him she might waver in her trust.

Tom Morton would have denied even to himself that his love was of the second kind described. But the fact that he found it necessary to assure himself over and over—"Of course Edith will not be angry, though she will be disappointed," or "The dear girl will trust me, even though I cannot be with her tonight," was proof beyond a doubt that he was not entirely sure of his betrothed's confidence in him.

For some minutes after the 4 o'clock train had pulled out of the Baltimore station the man stood lost in deep thought. Then he went to the ticket office and asked several questions. The next train for New York would not leave for an hour. It was the Congressional Limited, but it would not get him into the city until after 9 o'clock.

No matter how much he worried he could not go to his apartment, change to evening clothes and get out to Homewood until after the dinner guests he had departed. His hope had been that he might make the 5 o'clock train and reach his own apartment by 8:30, dress quickly and catch the 9:30 train to Homewood, arriving at his fiancee's house very soon after 10 o'clock.

Now that was impossible. There was no help for it. He could not see Edith tonight. And this was the evening on which the engagement was to have been announced! Yet, surely she would understand.

FELT RESENTMENT

After a while he went out of the station and paced up and down the platform, thinking out his problem. He felt a wave of resentment against Ralph sweep over him. What right had he to exact such a sacrifice of any friend? Why had he not done his own mean work?

Then Tom remembered his aunt—Ralph's mother—an invalid, the victim of confirmed heart disease, who would have been distressed and anxious had her boy not gone to her when she summoned him. Perhaps his failure to obey her request might have brought on a serious attack of illness. Ralph was right to hurry home when she asked him to. Under existing conditions what else was there for an only son to do?

Tom tried to put from his mind the temptation to remember that Ralph could have come on to Baltimore by an early train this morning, or that, after all, if he had done as his mother had asked him to do in the first place with the money instead of gambling it, all this trouble might have been avoided.

"We are both of us perfect, and we all make mistakes," Tom muttered to himself. "And surely Ralph will do all in his power to make Edith believe that I have used every effort to get there in time. Since he made me promise to hand the money to Mrs. Price, and to her alone, he will be much enough to see that I do not suffer for it in the estimation of the dear people at Homewood."

The thought moved him to telegraph to Ralph as well as to Edith. To the man he sent the following message:

"Could not see your friend until this afternoon. Missed train.

"T. M."

Somehow he felt better when he had sent off that note. Edith would know why he was detained and would be so sorry about it that he would lay especial stress on the fact that the business that had delayed Tom was most important. Perhaps—and Tom's heart glowed with the thought—he would even tell Edith the entire truth about the money, taking upon himself all the blame.

Why, of course, Ralph would do that! Tom would do it were the positions reversed, and certainly Ralph was better, more generous than he! His heart was lighter by the time he had reached this conclusion. He would send a long telegram to Edith. How silly it was to confine oneself to ten words in telegraphing! As if a hundred cents, more or less, were worth considering when the matter of making an explanation was at stake.

A LONG MESSAGE

So, with a fine disregard of expense, he drew a telegraph blank from its holder and set himself to the task of composing his message to his betrothed. He destroyed several perfectly good blanks before he was even partially satisfied with the results of his cogitations. This was the best that he could do under the circumstances, he decided at last and reread his message:

"Important business made me lose train. Intensely disappointed. Could catch nothing earlier than 11 o'clock train to Homewood. Please send message to me at my apartment. Am sure you will understand and share my distress. Love. T. M."

He paid for the message almost eagerly. It was good to be doing something that would seem to put him in communication with Edith. He had asked her to send him a line to his apartment because he longed to be assured of her comprehension of his feelings.

Of course, she would send him a message. He would find a telegram awaiting him, saying that she understood and telling him to come out as early as possible tomorrow. What a comfort it was to be engaged to a girl who had faith in him!

All of which was a little like a small boy who whistles in going through a dark tool to prove that he is not afraid.

It was with a sigh of genuine relief that Tom Morton boarded the Congressional Limited and selected his seat. He placed his bag in the Pullman chair and closed his eyes with the concentrated thought of the comfortable bridge that every hour nearer New York and the woman he loved.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WE had to git a new hired gurl yesterday beekaus Pa fired the one that was too full of intelleck. She made Pa mad beekaus she used sum words that he had to look up in the dickshunary & Pa sed he wuddent have a gurl working for us that cud drive him to Webster's.

The name of the new gurl is Imogene. Her last naim is Duffy. She worked in a resterant a long time & she knows a lot of nice slang wurds with she is going to teech me, if Ma doesnt find it out.

Well, well, so sure naim is Imogene Duffy, sed Pa wen Ma sed This is the new gurl. If a very funnyyou naim I should call it, too, sed Pa. I had a Irish gurl once whos naim was Deadening Dugan, & she had the saim merry twinkel in her eye that you have.

What do you mean, merry twinkel, sed Imo-gene. Say, Mister, she sed to Pa, if nerve was munie you wud be a orkestry. Say off of me for my monaker, she sed, or me for the exit, we. So I'll allways stay with the knife. He was a ringer for you, too, she sed to Mrs. Jo, old ringer, only he had more forehed.

Imo-gene, sed Ma, that will be enuff conversation from you. You are here to wait on us & not entertain us.

I dount think that Miss Duffy is going to have a very long leese of life here, sed Pa wen Imo-gene went out in the kitchin. She talks too much with her mouth.

You started it yurself, sed Ma. I shall never be shel to keep a gurl if you encourage them all to be flip. You dount show enuff dignity around our chillern always, sed Ma. Remember that familiarity breeds fresh-ness, she todld Pa, & after this do not give this gurl a opening to talk back to you.

I supoas the reeson I aint at hoam ware servants is, sed Pa, is beekaus at hoam we never had a servant. One of the nabor's gurls used to cum onst in a while & help, but she was always like one of the family, & jest then Imogene caim in saggein.

Say, lady, she sed to Ma, I am afrade that the roast is on the frits. You better tell that fish-faced butcher wen he cums tomorrow that if he can't furnish you with big league meat he can make his getaway, see, If I was the lady of the house I wuddent let a mutt like him alip me a tony roast, she sed. Rather wud I perish.

I picked out that roast myself, Imogene, sed Ma.

Then you are a fierce picker, sed Imo-gene Duffy. After this you better leave it to the Irish. Let me go after that butcher, she sed, & if he dous't treat me like the Queen of Sheeby & give me the best in the cart, he will think he is surrounded by ten million suffragets. Then she went out aggein.

I reely beleeve she is going to be a jewel, sed Ma.

I am afrade she will have to go looking for another setting, sed Pa.

Slight Misunderstanding

Drowsily the hotel manager turned in his bed.

Whirr-r, whirr-r! rang the telephone. Muttering something very low, he reached out for the receiver.

"Send someone up to Room 77 at once," came the voice of old Mrs. Moneybags.

"I trust you are not ill, madam!" said the manager.

"I soon shall be if something is not done!" replied the old lady, in excited tones.

Hurriedly dressing, the manager went to Room 77.

"Now, listen!" said the O. L., in wrathful key. "What is that noise overhead? It has been going on for the last two hours and has nearly driven me mad."

"I cannot understand it, madam," answered the manager, listening carefully to the bumps and bangs overhead. "The gentleman in that room is ill."

Quickly he ran upstairs, and inquired the cause of the disturbance. The occupier of the room was a Frenchman.

"It ees the medicine, m'sieur," he explained, on being questioned. "The doctor did say 'Take two night runs,' ring, then skip a night.' M'sieur, pardon, but I was doing the skip!"

A Success

"Was the dear girl happily married?" asked the friend.

"Yes, indeed," answered Miss McGabble; "it was one of the happiest weddings I ever saw. I never saw so few duplicates among the presents of cut glass and silverware."

"Charm," the Elusive

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"MAYBE we ought not to rate charm so highly, but ever since the world began human nature has been attracted by it and repelled by a lack of it.

Charm is the quality that lightens and brightens and illuminates all of life. It is not one of the homely, practical virtues like efficient housekeeping, or faithful service. It is instead the bright cover that attracts us to the magazine, the clever headline that makes us read an article, or the fragrant sauce that makes a bread pudding delicious.

People who crave love are not always most generously dowered with it reward. It is like people who stir our love into life who appeal to us We are always grateful for anything that shows us our own capability for deep feeling.

The story or play that makes us laugh or cry—that appeals to our emotions—is the one that is popular.

The quality that rouses us, that keeps us from feeling old and stolid, that stirs us to desire, is charm.

The most interesting thing in life is the chase after the desired goal.

And the secret of charm is to be a little elusive, to keep men and women alike guessing. The charming woman is the one who does not always do or say just what you might have expected. She stirs you to activity and feeling by making you wonder just what she is thinking or feeling, just what she will do next.

There are all sorts of charm, as there are all sorts of people to whom it may appeal. But it is always the seasoning that imparts a zest to life.

To be charming he mentally active, so that you will never be a bore.

Be spiritually alive, so that you will not fall below the growth of life and ideals all about you.

Give of yourself, but never so freely that you will tire people and have them wish you would leave them in peace.

Have a certain little air of withdrawal. Keep some of yourself sacred to yourself.

Keep yourself high and fine—always to be aspired to and never quite reached. Be capable of scoring on a poem or a dream in a world-today world. Be an INDIVIDUAL and you will have charm!

All Through His Bellows

Parson Wells went off to buy a horse, and, as this married on epoch in his career in Pilsbury, his household was slightly excited.

"Master," confidentially said old Shooks, the gardener, "if you're thinking of buyin' one o' them black-an'-white 'orse, let me tell 'ee it's short-winded."

"Right! I'll give it a trial to test it," answered the parson knowingly, and accordingly suggested to the prospective seller that he would like to see a trial run.

After a fair gallop the horse returned panting.

"Now, sir, isn't his wind fine?" said the owner, trying to distract the parson's attention from the horse's obvious failings by stroking the animal's back.

"Yes, my good man," came the quick answer; "but I don't like the pants!"

Do You Know That—

As a means of preventing small boys from "hanging on" to motor cars an engineer has fitted up a contrivance which gives an electric shock to the delinquent. It consists of a small battery and a coil of wire, so that by the pressing of a button metal parts of the vehicle are electrically charged.

There is now building at Schenectady the largest electric hoist in the world. This hoist, which is to be installed in the Crown Mines at Johannesburg, is designed to raise 16,000 pounds of ore per trip, from a depth of 3,450 feet at a speed of 3,500 feet per minute. The tare weight of the skip is 8,500 pounds, and the winding rope, which is two inches in diameter, weighs 6.14 pounds per foot run. The total weight of the winding motors, excluding bearings and shafts, will be 240,000 pounds, and the maximum intermittent output from these machines will be 9,000 horsepower.

To Keep Skin White, Velvety, Wrinkle-Free

IF M. W. says: "If pergine is recommended that powder makes my face dried, flaky and creams make it greasy and shiny. What can I do?" Try the treatment recommended by "Anise."

A. P. G. writes: "My skin seems so loose and wrinkly in hot weather. What will help it?" Use a wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. This is inexpensive, effective in any weather, or flabby condition. Use daily for awhile and results will astonish you.

Anise: A simple way to keep your skin smooth, soft and white is to apply ordinary mercolized wax before retiring, washing it off in the morning. This keeps the face free from the particles of lifeless cuticle which constantly appear. The wax absorbs these worn out particles, so the younger, fresher, healthier skin is always in view. An ounce of mercolized wax may be had at small cost at any druggists. Use the cold cream.—Aunt Sally in Woman's Realm.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE TIME TO BE TRUE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen, and have been engaged to a young man who I love very much for six months. He lost his position, and has been out of employment for the past two months. This young man loves me dearly. Some of my friends are trying to influence me to break my engagement. He has prospects of getting in the government service, as he is on the postoffice clerks' list.

A BROKEN HEART.

YOU love him, you say? Prove it by being true to him in his misfortune. He needs all the encouragement he can get, and his friends are not friends if they would go back on him now. Don't, my dear, confuse "misfortune" with "fault."

CULTIVATE SOME INTEREST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of twenty-three years of age and decidedly plain in looks. I am told that I possess no charm and am called a "crank" by my family. I have no taste for business or housekeeping. Even children annoy me. Still I am exceedingly desirous to succeed in some manner in life. Dear Miss Fairfax, what shall I do?

HOPELESS.

THE very first thing for you to do is to find interest in this world full of workers. As long as everything bores you and you have nothing to think about outside of your own lack of attractions, how can you expect others to be interested in you? Have you ever tried making a hat or a pretty blouse or making a dainty salad or cake, or even rich loaves of bread? There is great joy in looking at something and thinking, "I did that." If you are happy and animated and busy you will not long be plain, cranky and without charm.

Overworked Nerves and Stomachs

Toned Up With Sanfords Ginger

It strikes the solar plexus, the center of nerve and stomach difficulties.

A delicious combination of ginger, aromatics and French brandy for the relief of cramps, pains, colds, chills, weakness, nervousness and insomnia. BETTING IN PARIS FAVORS CONVICTION OF MME. CAILLAUX

PARIS, July 25.—The betting in sporting circles which has hitherto favored the acquittal of Mme. Caillaux has taken a new turn as a result of the testimony in the case of her husband's first wife, and wagers were offered that the defendant would be found guilty of the murder of Gaston Calmette.

Mme. Caillaux has become one of the most talked of women in Paris in consequence of her amazing story on the stand, her theatrical attitude and her cleverness as a witness.

Another person who has come to the fore through the medium of the Caillaux case, Maitre Charles Chenu, counsel for Calmette's family, has emerged from the comparatively obscure legal ranks to high place among Parisian lawyers. Chenu is now guided more, it is said, by Calmette's widow than he was by the late editor of Figaro.

To substantiate further the contention that Calmette did not hold other letters he intended to publish, Frans Reichel, secretary of the late Figaro, was called. He said that on the Sunday night before the shooting he left the office with Calmette and mentioned the publication of the Caillaux letters. He said the debate was scheduled in the Chamber of Deputies.

"I would like to publish it, but I have promised not to," Reichel said Calmette asserted.

"It is all I have left," he declared the editor continued, this statement being intended to establish that Calmette did not book private letters.

Henry Bernstein, noted playwright and author, an intimate friend of Calmette, vigorously defended the dead editor. He declared that from things Calmette had told him he was convinced he did not offer Mme. Caillaux 20,000 francs or any other amount to arrange an interview for him with Mme. Gueydan.

Georges Bonnamour, Chamber of Deputies reporter for L'Echo, said he was with others when Auguste Avril made the remark that the "Dos Joe" letter was just the beginning of Calmette's campaign and that other letters were to follow. He said it was his impression, from the statements, however, that the documents would be published in political instead of a private shape.

Immediately after the shooting of Calmette Avril went to the rooms of M. Labori to consult with the lawyer. They went over the text of the letters. They went over the relationship between Caillaux and his present wife before they were married. Avril, it is said, made the famous snake of his determination to divorce Mme. Gueydan, his first wife, so that he could marry Caillaux. The letter concluded with the expression "Millions of kisses to my dear little one."

HIS DEAR CHARMER.

The letter which Labori was reading when Mme. Caillaux arrived began "My dearest and dear enchantress:

"When I first met you my whole being turned toward you. I was humiliated and unhappy, but you beckoned and I hastened toward you with furious passion and fine courage. I adore you with all my heart."

A great deal of the letters was taken up by Caillaux's telling of the temperamental difficulties between himself and his first wife. In one place the statesman said he would risk losing his seat in the chamber of deputies by obtaining a divorce before the forthcoming elections if I could."

Another passage said: "I hurl myself into your arms with all the force of my passion."

When Mme. Caillaux returned to the court room she was accompanied by Dr. Pozzi, a man famous as a distinguished medical men who happened to be among the spectators when she fainted. There had attended her.

Great crowds largely made up of women, flocked to the preliminary trial of Mme. Caillaux for the killing of Editor Calmette, hoping to get seats anticipating the possible reading of the five North sheets of letters which Maitre Labori, yesterday, handed over to the court at Versailles.

Mme. Caillaux's counsel, M. Archibald, said today concerning the letters:

"They are innocuous. They contain several disparaging references to Mme. Caillaux's character, however, and concludes the possibilities of his obtaining a divorce from her. This, however, is now impossible, as, shortly after the elections. They are commonplace letters of a purely political nature of no importance whatever."

Dr. Albert Calmette, director of the Pasteur Institute, left London with his wife to testify to the character of his brother.

"I am convinced," said Dr. Calmette, "that if Madame Caillaux had simply opened her heart to me she would only said to my brother. As it true that you have in your possession the private letters of my wife?' He would immediately have reassured her. If you have been scrupulous was my brother with his word! He would have revealed Madame Caillaux's approbation."

"BEST OF WOMEN."

"I go farther. He would have offered her his arm to escort her to her carriage, he would have filled her automobile with flowers.

"Attempts have been made here to defile the memory of my brother by speaking of the manner in which he made his fortune. As the guardian of his children it was my duty to see that my brother worked hard all his life. His work did not enrich him greatly, for in his profession one rarely becomes wealthy. But everybody knows how he combined strong character with gentleness, that his fortune grew. It is common knowledge that it was as a result of the legacy of M. Chauchard the proprietor of a great department store that my brother's fortune was made. There is no reason to blush for it."

Dr. Gaillard, Mme. Caillaux' dentist, testified that she had made an appointment with him for two days after the tragedy. Her physician, Dr. Mercitny, also gave evidence.

"Mme. Caillaux is the best of women," he said. "Her character is sweet and calm. I was stupified when I learned of the drama."

SHOT CLOSE TO VICTIM.

Mme. Caillaux stood within six feet of Gaston Calmette when she fired six shots, four of which sent bullets into the body of the editor and killed him in his office last March. With the trial of the beautiful wife of the former Premier having covered every angle from political charges to the affairs of Caillaux and Mme. Gueydan, his first wife, this is the point Prosecutor Herbaux will bring out when medical experts who examined the clothing and body of the murdered editor are called to the stand.

Henry Bernstein, noted playwright and author, an intimate friend of Calmette, vigorously defended the dead editor. He declared that from things Calmette had told him he was convinced he did not offer Mme. Caillaux 20,000 francs or any other amount to arrange an interview for him with Mme. Gueydan.

To substantiate further the contention that Calmette did not hold other letters he intended to publish, Frans Reichel, secretary of the late Figaro, was called. He said that on the Sunday night before the shooting he left the office with Calmette and mentioned the publication of the Caillaux letters. He said the debate was scheduled in the Chamber of Deputies.

Every eye was strained during the reading of the letters. Before many sentences had been read it was evident that those who went to court to sate lurid or salacious curiosity were going to be well paid.

Even though M. Labori promised to omit those parts which were thought to blight the name which were rank warp of a most intimate character and couched in terms of endearment.

The face of M. Caillaux during the reading of the letters was a study. He bent his head over the desk before him, keeping his head behind his eyes so that he might hear the words. When Mme. Caillaux followed her husband was one of the first to reach her side. He left the courtroom with her and kissed her. Court was adjourned for half an hour to give Mme. Caillaux time to recover.

M. Labori began by reading three of the letters. They went from 1902 to the relationship between Caillaux and his present wife before they were married. The first letter, with the following day, Quinard said, Glaer and Herr of the Figaro opened the envelope, taking out a letter called "Dos Joe" letter written in Calmette's hand, and the Fabre report. The other papers were sealed and given to Dr. Albert Calmette at the hospital at Neuilly.

Etienne Grosclaude of the Figaro staff, a close friend of Calmette, was called as a witness. He testified that he knew Calmette intended to begin publishing personal letters written by Caillaux to Mme. Raynouard before their marriage. He declared Calmette might well have published other portions of the "Dos Joe" letter, but withheld all but the part he deemed of political import.

Arrested With Cash Register in His Arms

Charged with breaking and entering and the larceny of a cash register and contents, amounting to three dollars, a man, giving the name of William Harrison and claiming to live in East Boston, was arrested early today by Patrolman Horgan of the Hanover street station, who found him on Ferry street carrying the register in his arms. Horgan found that the rear window of the store of Guiseppe Catalanotti, at No. 3 the five North street was forced open and the cash register was missing.

Pray for Nation, Not for Congress

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Representative Pear of Ohio told the House of Representatives today that he opens its meetings each day with prayer. "A constituent of mine was in the gallery a few days ago with his young son," said Mr. Pear. "They watched the Speaker rap for order, and heard him open the session with prayer. The son asked the father: 'Papa, the house needed a clergyman and the prayer.

"Congress does not need prayers, the father replied, but the people do. Congress should immediately have reassured her. If you have been scrupulous was our brother with his word! He would have revealed Madame Caillaux's approbation."

Doctors' Prescriptions in Plain English

And the Word POISON on Every Prescription That Contains a Poison—Why Not?

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

It is notorious that the great majority of drug fiends have been created innocently, carelessly, or otherwise by doctors.

The hopeless woman victim of morphine usually got her first dose from a doctor.

And of cocaine victims the same is true.

In the fight against the drug habit the States make an exception in favor of doctors and permit them to issue prescriptions that will supply the drugs.

In the Boylan Act, just made into law, New York has taken a step for the prevention of reckless distribution of drugs and the making of drug fiends.

This law holds physicians, doctors and veterinarians strictly responsible for their drug prescriptions, compels them to issue all prescriptions for drugs and narcotics, that form habits, upon certain blanks supplied by the State. These blanks are to be kept numbered and the records are open.

New York's new act compels the druggist to keep the prescription which he fills when it calls for one of the dangerous drugs. He cannot return it to the patient to be used elsewhere. The doctor is compelled to examine the patient before making the prescription —which ought to be a mere matter of course—the druggist cannot fill a prescription more than ten days old—and he must telephone to the doctor to confirm the genuineness of the prescription.

The taking of drugs, cocaine especially, is a growing curse in the country. In the prisons and poorhouses a regular traffic is carried on. It has been found impossible to prevent that traffic.

In all probability confirmed victims of the drug will in one way or another, with the aid of criminals from the underworld or criminal physicians and druggists, obtain what they want.

But the quick enforcement of reasonable laws would prevent the creation of new drug fiends.

Every doctor should be compelled to write his prescriptions plainly, so that the patient or the father or mother or husband or wife would know WHAT DRUGS THE PRESCRIPTION CALLS FOR.

The mere fact that the doctor is quite content with himself and his superior wisdom is not sufficient.

He should be compelled to write out in plain English the name and character of the drug he prescribes.

He should not be allowed to insert any poison in a prescription without writing plainly "Poison" on the prescription.

Mystery and gloomy superiority are no longer part of the stock in trade of reputable physicians. Their work is based on common sense, prevention, and most of them follow the preaching of Osler, who denounces the unnecessary administering of heart stimulants and narcotics.

The individual who pays the doctor has a right to know WHAT the doctor is giving him, and the doctor like every other should be compelled to use plainly the word "Poison" when he dispenses poison.

Good-By, One of the "Four Big Reasons"

Government Ownership Has Punctured One Fallacy, and Will Do the Same for Others.

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

The parcels post is HERE and the United States Express Company has just gone out of business. Number ONE.

John Wanamaker said that there were four great reasons why the American people could not use their own postoffice to carry their own packages.

Those four reasons were the four great express companies—Wells-Fargo, Adams, American and United States.

Now the four reasons are cut down to three—the parcels post is a fact. Platt's United States Express is dead.

And all the nonsense about government ownership weakness is for a moment forgotten, while the express companies send their wagons abroad with the sign, "Extend Your Business—Great Reductions in Express Charges."

What the parcels post has done to the extortion of the express companies, the delay, incompetency and general inefficiency of those companies, government ownership of railroads will do for the railroads, and government ownership of other public monopolies will do for the gas companies, the electric light companies and the street railways.

The people of the United States are able to hire employes just as efficient as the United States Express Company, or the New York & New Haven Railroad—to put it mildly.

Government ownership will hire men TO SERVE THE PUBLIC instead of hiring men, as the private corporations do, to compete with each other, increase dividends and bribe officials.

The death of the United States Express Company is sad for the owners, cheerful for the public generally.

Great private monopolies have done good work. They have proved that competition IS UNNECESSARY AND WASTEFUL.

They have proved that one directing mind can take care of an entire public necessity.

The people having that fact impressed upon them are now ready to say WE SHALL BE THE DIRECTING MIND, and we shall be the individual power controlling monopolies—not you who live only to make them more profitable to yourselves—the private monopolists.

The Play Activities of Childhood

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

PLAY is an earnest thing in childhood, never a trivial matter. The play activities of children have a meaning which the world is beginning to understand. Parents are realizing more and more that children's play is not merely for fun, but for health, strength, mental development and the building of character.

Every home should provide interests in play and recreation for boys and girls. Part of the present-day failing of home training aims to do this. The home-made kindergarten is not a difficult thing for a mother to conduct, thus making work and play a benefit and a delight to the children.

Play gives joy, freedom, contentment and relaxation. A child who plays thoroughly, with perseverance and determination, will be thorough and persevering in life. Children are full of imagination, which finds expression in their games and play. A child's world is very real. Blocks, balls, water colors, clay, sand, spools or garden tools have a significance for him.

Children should be taught to play with as much care as they are taught how to study or to be busy with useful occupations. In their play activities they learn to use their minds and hands.

They build houses, teach school, make gardens, keep house, play soldier, drive cars, etc. In the great variety of their play they are gaining a fund of knowledge. Their play resembles the occupations or activities which they observe among their elders, and so they are imitative, inventive, their judgment, memory and reasoning powers are developed.

Girls are encouraged in the home-loving instinct by having a playroom equipped like a miniature house, where they may have their dolls and keep the house in order. Boys like to use tools in carpentering. They learn skill with hand and eye in constructing, industry in persevering in work.

Mothers make a mistake who follow their own fancies or convenience rather than the needs of the child. It is an injustice to a boy to repress his play instincts, provided they are not harmful. Often it is play that is prophetic of the occupation or career that may follow in later years.

Play is a social thing, and it is of importance that a child should not play alone too much or with only the companionship of older persons. Much may be learned of children's dispositions in play time with companions of their own age. Very interesting aspects of personality and character will be brought out.

These are valuable discoveries to parents, who may utilize the knowledge in guiding and helping each child.

By discreet observation, not interfering unless necessary, parents may see where there are faults to correct, weaknesses to be overcome, and should give their sympathetic counsel. Fine, strong, noble qualities may be discovered, and these are a hopeful sign for the future character.

Stars and Stripes

With Dewey doing the tango we'll have to set the "Star-Spangled Banner" to ragtime.

Kansas is fighting for dollar wheat and packers for dollar meat, while the consumer is fighting for the dollar.

Maxixe originated with the Amazon Indian, but the American "Indian" has appropriated it.

Meanest thief is the man who stole a girl's clothes and left her on the beach clad only in her bathing suit.

Man accused of having seven wives declares he has only five. Has he no refuse?

Jersey judge fined for auto speeding might remit the fine.

Chicago woman reduces weight on lemon peel. Banana peel also is good for bringing one's weight down.

Endothelioma is a new and rare disease, which, by virtue of its name, is likely to become as popular as appendicitis.

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" is to marry. Needn't expect to be a "little lord" afterward.

New Yorker who quits U. S. Mint for private business must have found a new way to coin money.

AFTER THE WEDDING

AN ILLUSTRATED STORY OF THE WAY A HOME WAS MADE

"I have a bit of news also, Tommie boy."

After Tom had talked to Jennie about being out late with the two women acquaintances and had left Jennie crying in another room, he sat in a chair with his head in his hands, thinking and thinking and wondering if this little home was going to break up as so many others have. Presently he felt two arms steal softly around his neck, a cheek pressed against his and a voice say, "Don't be angry with me, Tom. I guess I was wrong, and hereafter I'll try and do what you wish. The only reason I went out was because I got so lonesome sitting here alone all day, but hereafter I'm going to take more interest in our little home and try to keep busy so I won't get lonesome."

One day when Tom came home from work he was all smiles, full of speed and whistling merrily as he came up the stairs. Got good news, girlie," shouted Tom, as he bounded into the kitchen where Jennie was cooking supper. The boss called me into his office today, gave me a good boost in salary and a better job. But I'll have to work like the dickens. I don't care, though. I like it. The harder the work the better it suits yours truly."

Jennie came up to him and, putting her arms around his neck, told him, "I have a bit of news also, Tommie boy." And then she whispered something in his ear.

After this, in the evening when Tom got home from work, he would find Jennie busily sewing together little fluffy garments that are the joys of all good women's hearts. Then they would sit and talk of the great things THEIR boy was going to be some day.—H. C.

The Dream of Being Independent

Everyone Should Strive to Fulfill It

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

IN that delightful old book, the Gulistan of Sadi, we read: "They asked Hatim, 'Have you ever met or heard of a man superior to yourself?' He answered, 'Yes, one day I had made a sacrifice of forty camels, and invited the chief of every Arab tribe to the feast.

"Then I repaired to the border of the desert, where I met a woodcutter who had tied up his faggot to carry it into the city. I said, 'Why do you not to the feast of Hatim, where a crowd has assembled around the carpet?' He replied, 'Whoever can eat the bread of his own industry will not lay himself under obligation to Hatim' —and in the woodcutter I met my superior.'"

There is another old book, of which, like the Gulistan, we occidentals are far too ignorant, that is full of beautiful things, one of the most beautiful of which is this: "They shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree, and none shall make them afraid."

It is a picture of the proud, happy independence of which every self-respecting person has more than once fondly dreamed—the independence for which every one should ardently strive.

Under that vine or fig tree sat a true child of a man who was his own master, proud of his freedom, and scornful of the faintest intimation of servility.

Under that vine or fig tree sat a man who preferred the desert and its scanty fruits, with freedom, to the flesh pots of old Egypt with its slavery under the taskmaster's lash.

Socrates was one day invited by a great king to leave the dusty streets of Athens and come to live at his court, whereupon the old philosopher replied: "Meal is only two pennies a peck in Athens, and I can get all the water I want for nothing."

It was by that sort of man that it became possible for the earth to realize the "Glory which was Greece and the grandeur which was Rome."

The men who whipped the Persians at Marathon and Salamis, thus saving the white man's civilization from being swamped by the great Oriental wave, were freemen who ate the bread of their own industry, and knew what it was, in every respect, to be independent.

And the men who, beginning with the little camp on the Tiber, reared the mighty republic, never knew what it was to "bend the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift might follow fawning." They bowed down to no master. Each one was a freeman.

Regulus, Cincinnatus, the Scipios, with the rest of the immortal company whose valor made the republic what it was, thought more of their personal independence than they did of anything else in the world, and would have died before parting with it.

It was men like that who built the republic, and the republic did not begin to totter until the "footlickers" came, the cringing "sycophants" who felt no thrill of manly independence.

What American needs to be told that the men who made this country and gave it a "place among the nations of the earth" were strong believers in the independence of the individual man!

From General Washington down to the humblest private in the ranks the spirit that prevailed among the patriot band was that of an uncompromising self-respect —the spirit of the man versus that of the menial.

The fight for American independence was won by the farmers and artisans who, for the most part, owned the roof-trees that sheltered them and the soil from which they made their bread.

From the private homes, belonging to those who lived in them, rushed the patriots who were not to be bribed by British gold or terrified by British bayonets.

We may well wonder what might have happened had the men of '76 lived as many of us are living at the present time!

When the clarion-call came, "Fight for your homes and your firesides!" our forefathers knew perfectly well what it meant; but how would this other slogan, "Fight for your flats and your radiators!"—flats that don't belong to you, and radiators that wouldn't warm you if they did belong to you. With no more inspiration than that, the patriots would probably have gone down before the cohorts of King George and the battle would have been lost.

Dependence breeds servility, and in the atmosphere that it creates the heroic virtues perish and democracy cannot live together on the same soil.

And here may we see the danger of every form of centralism, governmental, industrial or intellectual, for it is as certain as anything can be in this world that our country, as our fathers made it, cannot last long after its people shall have become the servile tenantry of any species of domineering monopoly.

To preserve this republic we must preserve the spirit of the men who founded it, which was none other than the spirit of a manly independence.

If this republic is to live, it needs to be kept full of real men, not puppets; men who shall know their individual rights as against the claims of the various sorts of monopolists, and who shall be ever prepared to fight for those rights to the last ditch.
